

COUNCIL HELD ANOTHER LONG AND BUSY SESSION

Contemplated Improvement of Bradshaw Avenue Will Be Carried Through.

ORDINANCE IS TO BE PUBLISHED

Providing For the Work and Operations Will Soon Be Commenced.

NEW ORDINANCE INTRODUCED

Providing for an Increase in the Wages of City Firemen—Considerable Other Business of Importance Considered By the Solons.

When the members of council gathered last evening at the city hall it was with the expectation that the session would not continue longer than about 15 minutes. Owing to the absence of Clerk Hanley, together with the book of minutes, it was thought that only business of a pressing nature would be looked after. However, in spite of the understanding that a short meeting would be held, the city fathers got at their old-time tricks and did not adjourn until 10 o'clock.

Messrs. Nice and Cripps were absent when Acting Clerk McLane called the roll, but Cripps arrived some time later. A report was read from the members of the appraising board appointed to establish a rate of assessment for the improvement of Calcutta road and to place a proper valuation on the properties abutting that thoroughfare. The report was accepted.

A communication was read from a number of property owners on Vine street, asking that the thoroughfare be improved. The recent rains have done considerable damage to the street and it is in many places almost impassable. The communication was referred to the street committee and engineer.

The Bradshaw avenue improvement proposition was what took up the greater amount of council's time. It was brought up by Bullock and in the debates that followed all the solons had their round. At the previous meeting of council the ordinance providing for the improvement of Bradshaw avenue was laid on the table and its publication withheld pending the adjustment of minor details regarding the work. At the conclusion of the debates last evening it was decided to proceed with the work without delay.

A proposition was submitted from the East Liverpool Land company in which the agreement was made to furnish dirt for the necessary filling of Bradshaw avenue at 15 cents per yard. Bullock asked that the proposition be accepted, but Solicitor Gaston explained that it would not be legal to do so. Bullock asked the solicitor for an opinion as to how the matter should be attended to, and Mr. Gaston stated that the proposition should be placed on file. A motion to that effect carried.

A communication from Mrs. Jennie Kail was read, in which she consented to bear her share of the expense of the improvement. This added inspiration to those of the solons who have been agitating the improvement and all wanted the floor at the same time. Marshall said he thought the price of the work was exorbitant, but explained that he did not wish it understood he was trying to hold it back.

C. L. Gray was present and addressed the council. He urged that the contemplated improvement be pushed as much as possible and pointed out the necessity of having it done. His speech was forceful and carried sufficient weight with it to induce Cripps to make a motion that the ordinance be again taken up and acted on.

The ordinance provided for the construction of a storm water sewer and grading only, and Cripps thought the paving of the street should be included also. Marshall then spoke and endorsed Cripps' suggestion. Engineer Kelly told council he considered it to be advisable to give the contract for the entire job to one man.

A motion by Marshall to that effect carried. The ordinance when put in shape will be published and the clerk and mayor be instructed to advertise for bids.

A resolution was submitted asking that the bid of Harrison Rinehart, amounting to $1,165.70, be accepted for the construction of a sanitary sewer on Chestnut street. Considerable arguing was done in which McLane and Heddleston exchanged compliments, with the result that the bid was referred to the engineer, who will make an estimate of the cost of the job.

Orr brought the ancient Lounds' bill up before council. It was finally voted that the bill be rejected. A resolution was accepted providing for the publication of a notice of the estimated assessments of property owners on Calcutta road for the improvement of that thoroughfare.

An ordinance was introduced by Thomas and placed on first reading, which provides that the firemen's wages be increased to $2.50 per day and that they receive other equal rights as enjoyed by the members of the police force. Solicitor Gaston stated that he had investigated the claim of Attorney McGarry for damages asked by reason of an accident which befell an East End girl who was struck a few weeks since by a street car and who claimed she was forced to walk on the railway track owing to the bad condition of the sidewalk. He thought the claim should not be passed.

Orr said that the residents along Tanyard run were inconvenienced by the absence of an inlet from Oblique street, and that during heavy rains the property in that vicinity became flooded. The matter will be looked after.

Cripps, representing the street committee, reported that the steps leading up a certain alley to Lisbon road should be improved, but regarding the contemplated bridge across Carpenter's run he said the cost had been figured at $2,000, which was too expensive to think about.

The engineer was instructed to establish a grade on Summer lane. The session was then brought to a close.

Owing to the absence of the minutes the solons were very much handicapped and much business brought up was held over until the next meeting.

Heddleston occupied the president's chair in the absence of Nice.

THE PROJECT A NEW ONE

The New Line Is to Connect the Quaker Community With Canton And Cleveland Systems—The Survey Now in Progress.

Salem, June 26.—Salem has visions of a new street railway. It is said it is to be in operation between this city and Canton by January 1. John Pottorf, one of the engineers engaged in the survey, visited his father, Seamore Pottorf, south of the city, this week, and talked of the project. He said the intention was to have a through line to Cleveland. The Standard Surveying company of Detroit is engaged in marking the route. The corps started from Canton and is now working between Louisville and Maximo. The survey for the route is already finished between Alliance and Sebring. When Alliance is reached the surveyors will then start at Sebring and come on to Salem.

This railway scheme is an entirely different one from the Alliance, Sebring and Salem railway in which J. C. Whitla, H. W. Klein and others were interested. The route of the latter company is surveyed along the state road. The new company does not intend to use the roadway except to cross it, but will cut across the fields, farms and woods and use private right of way the entire distance. The route between this city and Alliance will be as near an air line as possible.

An office of the company has been located in Alliance. The power house for the Canton and Salem electric railway will be located at Alliance. The site has already been chosen and surveyed. The people behind the mammoth project are well known Cleveland capitalists, said to be the Everett-Moore syndicate.

Toronto, O., June 26.—The coming in of two paying wells in the Port Homer oil field within the past two weeks makes that field look better than it did, and will have a tendency to spur on further work in the way of continuing the search for the oleaginous fluid. The Miller well, which has been cleaned out, and put in good shape, is now said to be producing nearly 30 barrels. The well is on the Samuel Beebot farm. Another of the recent wells is that drilled by H. C. DeSelle near the school house, which has settled down to about a five barrel production.

Drilling will be started Monday on a well on the Squire Cooper farm.

Razors and Pistols Figured In Numerous Fierce and Bloody Fights.

Slashed With a Keen Blade in the Hands of His Antagonist.

BARTENDER'S NARROW ESCAPE

Negro Attempted to Cut His Throat, But Inflicted Only a Slight Wound. Assailant Arrested—Picnickers Caused Officers Much Trouble.

A crowd of tough colored people took advantage of the low rates offered by the excursion of the Avery Mission, Allegheny, to Rock Springs yesterday. The consequence was a great deal of fighting and disorder, both in Chester and in East Liverpool, and disgraceful scenes of drunkenness. The park officials state that there was no disorder on their grounds. It was the saloon patrons that raised the disturbances, and used their razors and revolvers freely.

A report that a colored woman who was assaulted in a melee had died on her way home could not be confirmed either at the Pittsburgh coroner's offices or at Pittsburgh newspaper offices and is probably untrue, though the woman was badly injured. In justice to the Avery Mission people it should be stated that the disorderly element did not belong to their party, but to outsiders who came along on the excursion. East Liverpool and Rock Springs were both glad when the last of the excursionists took their departure.

Several hundred dusky men and women spent the day on this side of the river and there was drinking, carousing and fighting galore.

In Chester affairs were also very brisk. Robert Spriggs and another darkey became embroiled in a quarrel while on the street car in charge of Motorman Wynne yesterday afternoon. They left the car near St. Clair's restaurant and made at one another. Spriggs drew a revolver and fired one shot at his antagonist, who proceeded to lay Spriggs' right arm open with a razor. The cut extended almost from the shoulder to the elbow and was clean to the bone. Friends of the participants interfered and no more blood was shed. The injured man was taken to St. Clair's yard and Mrs. St. Clair telephoned for Dr. Lewis. He responded and after dressing and sewing up the wound, he found that the patient had no money. Another picnicker had ransacked the injured man's pockets.

The doctor finally succeeded in getting $1.25 from one of the colored man's friends. This was all he received for his services. George Arner hauled the man from where the fight occurred to the St. Clair yard. A roll of bills containing $35 dropped out of his pocket and Mr. Arner picked it up. Later the colored man's friend called for it and Mr. Arner returned it after being assured that they had paid the doctor, which statement was untrue.

But one colored man was arrested by the Chester authorities. He was taken before Mayor Dunn and when it was found that he had no money he was released and sent back to Pittsburgh.

A colored woman was struck on the head with a ball bat by her lover. She was rendered unconscious by the blow. Her friends assisted her to Dr. Lewis' office, but he refused to permit them to enter the office, but offered to dress the wound while the woman remained on the outside. The colored people refused this and took her away. The woman was then almost naked.

In East Liverpool John Smith, of Allegheny, made an attempt to cut Walter Oleson's throat yesterday afternoon, and though he did succeed in inflicting a gash across the man's neck it was not serious. Oleson tends bar at Harry Hughes' saloon on Second street. Smith went in the bar-room while under the influence of liquor and tried to start a fight with two white men. Oleson interfered and attempted to eject the negro when the razor was brought into use.

Contemplated improvement of Bradshaw Avenue Will Be Carried Through.

ORDINANCE IS TO BE PUBLISHED

Providing For the Work and Operations Will Soon Be Commenced.

NEW ORDINANCE INTRODUCED

Providing for an Increase in the Wages of City Firemen—Considerable Other Business of Importance Considered By the Solons.

When the members of council gathered last evening at the city hall it was with the expectation that the session would not continue longer than about 15 minutes. Owing to the absence of Clerk Hanley, together with the book of minutes, it was thought that only business of a pressing nature would be looked after.
However, in spite of the understanding that a short meeting would be held, the city fathers got at their old-time tricks and did not adjourn until 10 o'clock.

Messrs. Nice and Cripps were absent when Acting Clerk McLane called the roll, but Cripps arrived some time later. A report was read from the members of the appraising board appointed to establish a rate of assessment for the improvement of Calcutta road and to place a proper valuation
on the properties abutting that thoroughfare. The report was accepted.

A communication was read from a number of property owners on Vine street, asking that the thoroughfare be improved. The recent rains have done considerable damage to the street
and it is in many places almost impassable. The communication was referred to the street committee and engineer.

The Bradshaw avenue improvement proposition was what took up the greater amount of council's time. It was brought up by Bullock and in the debates that followed all the solons had their round. At the previous meeting of council the ordinance providing for the improvement of Bradshaw avenue was laid on the table and its publication withheld pending
the adjustment of minor details regarding the work. At the conclusion of the debates last evening it was decided to proceed with the work without delay.

A proposition was submitted from the East Liverpool Land company in which the agreement was made to furnish dirt for the necessary filling of Bradshaw avenue at 15 cents per yard. Bullock asked that the proposition be accepted, but Solicitor Gaston explained that it would not be legal to do so. Bullock asked the solicitor for an opinion as to how the matter should be attended to, and Mr. Gaston stated that the proposition should be placed on file. A motion to that effect carried.

A communication from Mrs. Jennie Kail was read, in which she consented to bear her share of the expense of the improvement. This added inspiration to those of the solons who have been agitating the improvement and all wanted the floor at the same time. Marshall said he thought the price of the work was exorbitant, but explained that he did not wish it understood he was trying to hold it back.

C. L. Gray was present and addressed the council. He urged that the contemplated improvement be pushed as much as possible and pointed out the necessity of having it done.
His speech was forceful and carried sufficient weight with it to induce Cripps to make a motion that the ordinance be again taken up and acted on.

The ordinance provided for the construction of a storm water sewer and grading only, and Cripps thought the paving of the street should be included also. Marshall then spoke and endorsed Cripps' suggestion. Engineer Kelly told council he considered it to be advisable to give the contract for the entire job to one man.

A motion by Marshall to that effect carried. The ordinance when put in shape will be published and the clerk and mayor be instructed to advertise
for bids.

A resolution was submitted asking that the bid of Harrison Rinehart, amounting to $1,165.70, be accepted for the construction of a sanitary sewer on Chestnut street. Considerable arguing was done in which McLane and Heddleston exchanged compliments,

with the result that the bid was referred to the engineer, who will make an estimate of the cost of the job.

Orr brought the ancient Lounds' bill up before council. It was finally voted that the bill be rejected.

A resolution was accepted providing for the publication of a notice of the estimated assessments of property owners on Calcutta road for the improvement of that thoroughfare.

An ordinance was introduced by Thomas and placed on first reading,
which provides that the firemen's wages be increased to $2.50 per day and that they receive other equal rights
as enjoyed by the members of the police force.

Solicitor Gaston stated that he had investigated the claim of Attorney McGarry for damages asked by reason of an accident which befell an East End girl who was struck a few weeks since by a street car and who claimed
she was forced to walk on the railway track owing to the bad condition of the sidewalk. He thought the claim should not be passed.

Orr said that the residents along Tanyard run were inconvenienced by the absence of an inlet from Oblique street, and that during heavy rains the property in that vicinity became flooded. The matter will be looked after.

Cripps, representing the street committee, reported that the steps leading up a certain alley to Lisbon road should be improved, but regarding the contemplated bridge across Carpen-ter's run he said the cost had been figured at $2,000, which was too expensive to think about.

The engineer was instructed to establish a grade on Summer lane. The session was then brought to a close.

Owing to the absence of the minutes
the solons were very much handicapped and much business brought up was held over until the next meeting.

Heddleston occupied the president's chair in the absence of Nice.

Razors and Pistols Figured In Numerous Fierce and Bloody Fights.

ONE FIGHTER BADLY INJURED

Hands of His Antagonist.

BARTENDER'S NARROW ESCAPE

Negro Attempted to Cut His Throat,
But Inflicted Only a Slight Wound.
Assailant Arrested — Picnickers Caused Officers Much Trouble.

A crowd of tough colored people took advantage of the low rates offered by the excursion of the Avery Mission, Allegheny, to Rock Springs yesterday. The consequence was a great deal of fighting and disorder,
both in Chester and in East Liverpool, and disgraceful scenes of drunkenness. The park officials state that there was no disorder on their grounds.
It was the saloon patrons that raised the disturbances, and used their razors and revolvers freely.

A report that a colored woman who was assaulted in a melee had died on her way home could not be confirmed either at the Pittsburg coroner's offices or at Pittsburg newspaper offices and is probably untrue, though the woman was badly injured. In justice to the Avery Mission people it should be stated that the disorderly element did not belong to their party, but to outsiders who came along on the excursion. East Liverpool and Rock Springs were both glad when the last of the excursionists took their departure.

Several hundred dusky men and women spent the day on this side of the river and there was drinking, carous-ing and fighting galore.

In Chester affairs were also very brisk. Robert Spriggs and another darkey became embroiled in a quarrel while on the street car in charge of Motorman Wynne yesterday afternoon. They left the car near St.
Clair's restaurant and made at one another. Spriggs drew a revolver and fired one shot at his antagonist, who proceeded to lay Spriggs' right arm open with a razor. The cut extended almost from the shoulder to the elbow and was clean to the bone. Friends of the participants interfered and no more blood was shed. The injured man was taken to St. Clair's yard and Mrs.
St. Clair telephoned for Dr. Lewis.
He responded and after dressing and sewing up the wound, he found that the patient had no money. Another picnicker had ransacked the injured man's pockets.

The doctor finally succeeded in getting $1.25 from one of the colored man's friends. This was all he received for his services. George Arner hauled the man from where the fight occurred to the St. Clair yard. A roll of bills containing $35 dropped out of his pocket and Mr. Arner picked it up. Later the colored man's friend called for it and Mr. Arner returned it after being assured that they had paid the doctor, which statement was untrue.

But one colored man was arrested by the Chester authorities. He was taken before Mayor Dunn and when it was found that he had no money
he was released and sent back to Pittsburg.

A colored woman was struck on the head with a ball bat by her lover. She was rendered unconscious by the blow.
Her friends assisted her to Dr. Lewis' office, but he refused to permit them to enter the office, but offered to dress
the wound while the woman remained on the outside. The colored people refused this and took her away.
The woman was then almost naked.

In East Liverpool John Smith, of Allegheny, made an attempt to cut Walter Oleson's throat yesterday afternoon, and though he did succeed in inflicting a gash across the man's neck it was not serious. Oleson tends bar at Harry Hughes' saloon on Second street. Smith went in the barroom while under the influence of liquor and tried to start a fight with two white men. Oleson interfered and attempted to eject the negro when the razor was brought into use.

COUNCIL HELD ANOTHER LONG AND BUSY SESSION

Contemplated Improvement of Bradshaw Avenue Will Be Carried Through.

ORDINANCE IS TO BE PUBLISHED

Providing For the Work and Operations Will Soon Be Commenced.

Providing for an Increase in the Wages of City Firemen—Considerable Other Business of Importance Considered By the Solons.

When the members of council gathered last evening at the city hall it was with the expectation that the session would not continue longer than about 15 minutes. Owing to the absence of Clerk Hanley, together with the book of minutes, it was thought that only business of a pressing nature would be looked after. However, in spite of the understanding that a short meeting would be held, the city fathers got at their old-time tricks and did not adjourn until 10 o'clock.

Messrs. Nice and Cripps were absent when Acting Clerk McLane called the roll, but Cripps arrived some time later. A report was read from the members of the appraising board appointed to establish a rate of assessment for the improvement of Calcutta road and to place a proper valuation on the properties abutting that thoroughfare. The report was accepted.

A communication was read from a number of property owners on Vine street, asking that the thoroughfare be improved. The recent rains have done considerable damage to the street and it is in many places almost impassable. The communication was referred to the street committee and engineer.

The Bradshaw avenue improvement proposition was what took up the greater amount of council's time. It was brought up by Bullock and in the debates that followed all the solons had their round. At the previous meeting of council the ordinance providing for the improvement of Bradshaw avenue was laid on the table and its publication withheld pending the adjustment of minor details regarding the work. At the conclusion of the debates last evening it was decided to proceed with the work without delay.

A proposition was submitted from the East Liverpool Land company in which the agreement was made to furnish dirt for the necessary filling of Bradshaw avenue at 15 cents per yard. Bullock asked that the proposition be accepted, but Solicitor Gaston explained that it would not be legal to do so. Bullock asked the solicitor for an opinion as to how the matter should be attended to, and Mr. Gaston stated that the proposition should be placed on file. A motion to that effect carried.

A communication from Mrs. Jennie Kail was read, in which she consented to bear her share of the expense of the improvement. This added inspiration to those of the solons who have been agitating the improvement and all wanted the floor at the same time. Marshall said he thought the price of the work was exorbitant, but explained that he did not wish it understood he was trying to hold it back.

C. L. Gray was present and addressed the council. He urged that the contemplated improvement be pushed as much as possible and pointed out the necessity of having it done. His speech was forceful and carried sufficient weight with it to induce Cripps to make a motion that the ordinance be again taken up and acted on.

The ordinance provided for the construction of a storm water sewer and grading only, and Cripps thought the paving of the street should be included also. Marshall then spoke and endorsed Cripps' suggestion. Engineer Kelly told council he considered it to be advisable to give the contract for the entire job to one man.

A motion by Marshall to that effect carried. The ordinance when put in shape will be published and the clerk and mayor be instructed to advertise for bids.

A resolution was submitted asking that the bid of Harrison Rinehart, amounting to $1,165.70, be accepted for the construction of a sanitary sewer on Chestnut street. Considerable arguing was done in which McLane and Heddleston exchanged compliments, with the result that the bid was referred to the engineer, who will make an estimate of the cost of the job.

Orr brought the ancient Lounds' bill up before council. It was finally voted that the bill be rejected.

A resolution was accepted providing for the publication of a notice of the estimated assessments of property owners on Calcutta road for the improvement of that thoroughfare.

An ordinance was introduced by Thomas and placed on first reading, which provides that the firemen's wages be increased to $2.50 per day and that they receive other equal rights as enjoyed by the members of the police force.

Solicitor Gaston stated that he had investigated the claim of Attorney McGarry for damages asked by reason of an accident which befell an East End girl who was struck a few weeks since by a street car and who claimed she was forced to walk on the railway track owing to the bad condition of the sidewalk. He thought the claim should not be passed.

Orr said that the residents along Tanyard run were inconvenienced by the absence of an inlet from Oblique street, and that during heavy rains the property in that vicinity became flooded. The matter will be looked after.

Cripps, representing the street committee, reported that the steps leading up a certain alley to Lisbon road should be improved, but regarding the contemplated bridge across Carpenter's run he said the cost had been figured at $2,000, which was too expensive to think about.

The engineer was instructed to establish a grade on Summer lane. The session was then brought to a close.

Owing to the absence of the minutes the solons were very much handicapped and much business brought up was held over until the next meeting.

Heddleston occupied the president's chair in the absence of Nice.

Henry Barthel, a bartender, employed in this city, was "touched" for a valuable gold watch at Rock Springs Sunday night. The theft was committed while the owner of the time piece was asleep, and although the police have a clue there has as yet been no arrest made.

Barthel claims he was lying on the ground near the pavilion and while listening to the music for a few moments. When he awoke the watch was gone. The matter was reported to the police, who have since been working on the case. The arrest of the thief is thought to be near at hand.

HOPES OF SALEM ARE ELEVATED

Visions of Another Street Railway. Part of a Great System.

THE PROJECT A NEW ONE

The New Line Is to Connect the Quaker Community With Canton and Cleveland Systems—The Survey Now in Progress.

Salem, June 26.—Salem has visions of a new street railway. It is said it is to be in operation between this city and Canton by January 1. John Pottorf, one of the engineers engaged in the survey, visited his father, Seamore Pottorf, south of the city, this week, and talked of the project. He said the intention was to have a through line to Cleveland. The Standard Surveying company of Detroit is engaged in marking the route. The corps started from Canton and is now working between Louisville and Maximo. The survey for the route is already finished between Alliance and Sebring. When Alliance is reached the surveyors will then start at Sebring and come on to Salem.

This railway scheme is an entirely different one from the Alliance, Sebring and Salem railway in which J. C. Whitla, H. W. Klein and others were interested. The route of the latter company is surveyed along the state road. The new company does not intend to use the roadway except to cross it, but will cut across the fields, farms and woods and use private right of way the entire distance. The route between this city and Alliance will be as near an air line as possible.

An office of the company has been located in Alliance. The power house for the Canton and Salem electric railway will be located at Alliance. The site has already been chosen and surveyed. The people behind the mammoth project are well known Cleveland capitalists, said to be the Everett-Moore syndicate.

NEW OIL WELLS

Make the Port Homer Field Look Much More Promising Than Formerly.

Toronto, O., June 26.—The coming in of two paying wells in the Port Homer oil field within the past two weeks makes that field look better than it did, and will have a tendency to spur on further work in the way of continuing the search for the oleaginous fluid. The Miller well, which has been cleaned out, and put in good shape, is now said to be producing nearly 30 barrels. The well is on the Samuel Beebout farm. Another of the recent wells is that drilled by H. C. DeSelle near the school house, which has settled down to about a five barrel production.

The defendant's attorney objected to the postponement and it was necessary for the plaintiff to ask for a jury trial in order to have the case held over.

EAST END

BOY BATHERS

By Their Actions Cause Complaint From East End Residents.

The residents of Ohio avenue and other streets fronting on the river have decided to put a stop to the swimming that is carried on in full view of their houses at all times in the day and evening. A number of boys can be seen here at almost any time in the day except when a policeman happens along, when they betake themselves to a hiding place among the bushes along the shore.

The residents, however, have learned their names, and one of them states this morning complaints will be made against them at once unless the practice is discontinued.

Mrs. J. W. Kennedy, of Corydon, Pa., arrived in the East End last evening and is visiting at the home of her sister, Mrs. W. J. Day, of Railroad street. Mrs. Kennedy arrived in the East End on Mrs. Day's birthday and the return of her child after so long a visit was a very pleasant surprise to Mrs. Day.

Seized With Convulsions.

The infant child of Mrs. Cora Kidd, who has been visiting at the home of her mother, Mrs. Margaret Wright, of Pennsylvania avenue, was taken suddenly ill with convulsions last evening and for a time the little one's recovery seemed doubtful. Mr. Kidd was telephoned at West Bridgewater and came to the East End on the midnight train. The child is better today and it is thought will be all right soon.

A Tennis Match.

WELLSVILLE

PURE, CLEAR WATER

ENGINEER BELIEVES IT CAN BE HAD FROM THE CREEK.

The Proposed System for Wellsville Would Cost About $117,000.

The supplementary report upon Little Yellow creek as a source of water supply for Greated Wellsville was submitted to the board of water trustees by Consulting Engineer Chapin, of Canton, last evening, and met with much approval.

The report is a long one. It is typewritten and is illustrated with a number of photographs. It is even more favorable to Little Yellow creek as a source of supply than was the preliminary report.

The report sets forth in detail the possibilities of the creek as a source of water supply and describes where the reservoir, the dam and the clear-water reservoir should be located, and gives estimates of the expense of constructing the several parts of a gravity system of water works on the creek. The superior quality of the creek water as compared with that of the river is pointed out.

Mr. Chapin's estimates of the cost of building the gravity system on the creek are as follows: For main dam and reservoir, $25,500; clear water reservoir, $22,500; pipe lines and appurtenances, $68,275; roads and telephone lines, $1,000; engineering and inspection, $5,035; total, $122,400.

The report includes an additional item of $8,500 for a high service reservoir on Bailey's run, which the board thinks is not necessary, and that item will be cut out. The board is of the opinion that about $117,000 will build the system.

The report states that with the additional high service reservoir on Bailey's run the city would have a system that would supply the demands of a city of 20,000 people. It would furnish pure water without the expense of a filtration plant. Omitting the Bailey's run reservoir the system will supply a city of 15,000 people. The board thinks that a system that will provide for 15,000 people is sufficient for some time.

Mr. Chapin estimates the dry weather flow of water at 637,500 gallons per day. With the Bailey's run reservoir this flow could be increased to 847,500 gallons per day. The Hammond farm, about three miles up the creek, is selected as the site for the clear-water reservoir. Its capacity is to be 33,000,000 gallons. Its water surface is to be 8.5 acres and 22 acres of land will be required for its construction and protection. The maximum depth of the water will be 22 feet. The object of this reservoir is to provide a supply of clear water at all times. The water will flow from the main storage reservoir to the clear-water reservoir.

The great dam and storage reservoir is located on the Martha Campbell farm. It is to have a capacity of 55,000,000 gallons. The dam is to be an arch dam, rising 30 feet above the bed of the creek. The water surface of the reservoir will be 12.50 acres, and the maximum depth of the water will be 30 feet.

Of the water to be obtained from such a system the report says: "There is no question that it will be far superior to the best supply to be had from the river, and well adapted for both domestic and manufacturing purposes."

The report will be published and distributed. The board is to arrange to have Engineer Emil Kuichling, of Rochester, N. Y., pass upon Mr. Chapin's report, and the entire problem presented by the creek.

Chase's receipt book is known, as also in many parts of this country his skill as a physician, and from the great success of his medicines the name will be handed down from generation to generation. I was asked to try Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills and did so, getting them at Larkins' drug store, corner Sixth and East Market streets. The result was very good indeed, as the biliousness was overcome—the headaches cured and bodily and nerve strength furnished. Dr. A. W. The residents, however, have learned their names, and one of them states this morning complaints will be made against them at once unless the practice is discontinued.

BOY BATHERS

By Their Actions Cause Complaint From East End Residents.

The residents of Ohio avenue and other streets fronting on the river have decided to put a stop to the swimming that is carried on in full view of their houses at all times in the day and evening. A number of boys can be seen here at almost any time in the day except when a policeman happens along, when they betake themselves to a hiding place among the bushes along the shore.

The residents, however, have learned their names, and one of them states this morning complaints will be made against them at once unless the practice is discontinued.

The series of lectures have been productive of much good, and thus far have all been very interesting and well attended.

Mrs. Kennedy arrived in the East End on Mrs. Day's birthday and the return of her child after so long a visit was a very pleasant surprise to Mrs. Day.

KNOWS AGUINALDO

Another Wheeling Man Apparently on Friendly Terms With the Ex-Rebel.

Writing from Alaminos, Zambales, P. I., May 16, F. Jay Pickard, of Co. B, Seventeenth U. S. infantry, formerly acting interpreter, disputes the claim of Earl Criswell, of Wheeling. Criswell was alleged to have said he was the only man from the Nail City that ever shook hands with Aguinaldo. Mr. Pickard says in a letter to the News Review:

"I have not only shaken hands with him, but have sat at the same table and eaten rice with him, and also with General Luna, who is now dead.

"I have been here in this country since the taking of San Fernando. The Twenty-third is not on this island, and has not been, but on the island of Negros, south of here. General Aguinaldo said, since his capture, that he had been in Northern Luzon—that is, north of Manila—since the beginning of the insurrection. I only wish to let Mr. Criswell see that he is not the only Wheeling man who did as he said. I can prove every word I say."

WELLSVILLE

PURE, CLEAR WATER

ENGINEER BELIEVES IT CAN BE HAD FROM THE CREEK.

The Proposed System for Wellsville Would Cost About $117,000.

The supplementary report upon Little Yellow creek as a source of water supply for Greater Wellsville was submitted to the board of water trustees by Consulting Engineer Chapin, of Canton, last evening, and met with much approval.

The report is a long one. It is typewritten and is illustrated with a number of photographs. It is even more favorable to Little Yellow creek as a source of supply than was the preliminary report.

The report sets forth in detail the possibilities of the creek as a source of water supply and describes where the reservoir, the dam and the clear-water reservoir should be located, and gives estimates of the expense of constructing the several parts of a gravity system of water works on the creek. The superior quality of the creek water as compared with that of the river is pointed out.

Mr. Chapin's estimates of the cost of building the gravity system on the creek are as follows: For main dam and reservoir, $25,500; clear water reservoir, $22,500; pipe lines and appurtenances, $68,275; roads and telephone lines, $1,000; engineering and inspection, $5,035; total, $122,400.

The report includes an additional item of $8,500 for a high service reservoir on Bailey's run, which the board thinks is not necessary, and that item will be cut out. The board is of the opinion that about $117,000 will build the system.

The report states that with the additional high service reservoir on Bailey's run the city would have a system that would supply the demands of a city of 20,000 people. It would furnish pure water without the expense of a filtration plant. Omitting the Bailey's run reservoir the system will supply a city of 15,000 people. The board thinks that a system that will provide for 15,000 people is sufficient for some time.

Mr. Chapin estimates the dry weather flow of water at 637,500 gallons per day. With the Bailey's run reservoir this flow could be increased to 847,500 gallons per day. The Hammond farm, about three miles up the creek, is selected as the site for the clear-water reservoir. Its capacity is to be 33,000,000 gallons. Its water surface is to be 8.5 acres and 22 acres of land will be required for its construction and protection. The maximum depth of the water will be 22 feet. The object of this reservoir is to provide a supply of clear water at all times. The water will flow from the main storage reservoir to the clear-water reservoir.

The great dam and storage reservoir is located on the Martha Campbell farm. It is to have a capacity of 55,000,000 gallons. The dam is to be an arch dam, rising 30 feet above the bed of the creek. The water surface of the reservoir will be 12.50 acres, and the maximum depth of the water will be 30 feet.

Of the water to be obtained from such a system the report says: "There is no question that it will be far superior to the best supply to be had from the river, and well adapted for both domestic and manufacturing purposes."

The report will be published and distributed. The board is to arrange to have Engineer Emil Kulchling, of Rochester, N. Y., pass upon Mr. Chapin's report, and the entire problem presented by the creek.

Wellsville is going to have a ferry service to Congo after all. Joseph Lockhart, of Congo, has leased from Watson C. Johnson the ferry landing at Congo. Mr. Lockhart states that he will get a boat just as soon as he can.

Madden then put the handcuffs on Nailer, but the negro became ugly, and, giving his hands a sudden twist he broke the chain connecting the two iron bracelets and started to run. Madden caught him, and after a short tussle Nailer was willing to go along quietly. He was locked up.

IN HIGH REPUTE

The Great Author And Physician, Dr. A. W. Chase, Is Remembered in East Liverpool.

All over the world Dr. A. W. Chase's receipt book is known, as also in many parts of this country his skill as a physician, and from the great success of his medicines the name will be handed down from generation to generation. Attempts are often made to sell other medicines over the reputation of the doctor—some go so far as to use the name "Chase," but they dare not use the initials "A. W."—portrait or signature which is borne on every box of the genuine—the kind referred to by Mrs. George Hall, of 389 West Market street, East Liverpool, O., who says: "I was bilious—my head ached hard and constantly—there was a general feeling of weakness and depression. I was asked to try Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills and did so, getting them at Larkins' drug store, corner Sixth and East Market streets. The result was very good indeed, as the biliousness was overcome—the headaches cured and bodily and nerve strength furnished. Dr. A. W. Chase's Ointment I can vouch for in burns as a fine application."

Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills are sold at 50 cents a box, also Dr. A. W. Chase's Ointment at 50 cents a box at dealers, or Dr. A. W. Chase Medicine company, Buffalo, N. Y. See that portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M. D., are on every package.

Cut this out and take it to Alvin H. Bulger's drug store and get a box of Chamberlain's Stomach & Liver Tablets. The best physic. They also correct disorders of the stomach. Price 25 cents.

To All Manufacturers And Water Consumers.

For the next ten days, commencing this day, June 26, the reservoir will be empty so that a connection can be made between the old and new reservoirs. Therefore, we request all consumers to be careful and use as little as possible.

The water department will furnish ample water for all purposes during the time the reservoir is empty, but you can help the department by being careful and by not allowing any waste.

VERY QUICK WORK

By the Columbus Convention In Naming a Republican Ticket.

A GOOD STRONG PLATFORM

Ohio Republican Convention Finished Its Work In Short Order—Hanna Cut Short His and Others' Speeches and Rushed Business.

Columbus, O., June 26.—The Republican state convention nominated the following ticket:

Governor—George K. Nash.
Lieutenant Governor—Carl L. Nippert.
Supreme Judge—J. L. Price.
Attorney General—John M. Sheets.
Clerk of the Supreme Court—Lawson E. Emerson.
State Treasurer—Isaac B. Cameron.
Member of Board of Public Works—W. G. Johnson.

The convention reconvened Tuesday from Monday, and was in session from about 10:10 a. m. to about 1:10 p. m. The intense heat was prostrating, and Chairman Hanna not only cut short his own speech, but also those of others, and then dispatched business with speed.

Quick Work in Convention.

In about three hours the convention nominated a full state ticket, adopted its declaration of principles, endorsed Joseph F. Foraker as the Republican candidate for re-election as United States senator, completed the party organization for the campaign, and transacted other business.

Of the seven nominations only three were new men, and one of these, Nippert, for lieutenant governor, was nominated without opposition, after Lieutenant Governor Caldwell had declined renomination. Nash, Sheets, Cameron and Johnson were renominated for second terms without opposition. There were free-for-all contests for the nomination for supreme judge and clerk of the supreme court.

It had been currently reported that Crew and Critchfield were on the Hanna slate for these two nominations, but Senator Hanna vigorously denied taking any part whatever in the contests for these two places. The vote showed that Price and Emerson had formed a combination that worked successfully for both of them. Judge Price, of Lima, has been on the common pleas and circuit benches, and Emerson has been prominent in politics in Eastern Ohio for years.

The nomination that caused the most comment was that of Nippert in place of Lieutenant Governor Caldwell, the latter being the only one who was elected with Governor Nash two years ago that was not renominated for a second term. The State Anti-Saloon league caused Caldwell to run several thousand behind his ticket in 1899, and had vigorously opposed his nomination. There were frequent calls for Caldwell in the convention, but he could not be induced to take the platform. While the delegates were calling for Caldwell, Chairman Hanna made Caldwell a member of the committee to escort Governor Nash to the hall, to deliver his speech of acceptance, and while the committee was out Chairman Hanna promptly called up the next order of business and State Senator Nippert was nominated. Nippert has been principal of schools in Cincinnati and police prosecutor there.

Senator Foraker was accompanied last night to Cincinnati by a large delegation. Senator Hanna and Governor Nash went to Gambier, where they are to deliver addresses today at the commencement of Kenyon college.

What the Resolutions Contain.

The report of the resolutions committee, which was unanimously adopted by the convention as the platform of the party in Ohio, reaffirms the Philadelphia platform; pledges undivided support to the Republican party, the magnificent achievements of which, it is declared, have added lustre to American history and under the administration of which the United States has become a world power. Industry has revived, it is set forth, plenty has succeeded want, and our export trade now leads the world.

The gold standard is specifically endorsed. Further strengthening of the navy, legislation looking to the restoration of the merchant marine, the speedy construction of an American ship canal across the isthmus, are declared to be imperative needs.

In regard to combinations of capital the platform says:

"We recognize the right of both labor and capital to combine when such combinations are wisely administered for the general good, but combinations which create monopolies to control prices or limit production are an evil which must be met by effective legislation, vigorously enforced."

Congress is asked to renew the humane and reasonable laws and treaties for the continued protection of American labor. This has particular reference to the expiration of the act.

A ringing tribute is paid to the soldiers and sailors of Uncle Sam.

Attempts to deprive any citizen of his right to vote under the constitution is denounced, and the demand is made that representation in congress and in the electoral college shall be based on the actual voting population, proportionate reduction being made for any state in which the right of suffrage shall be denied, except for crime.

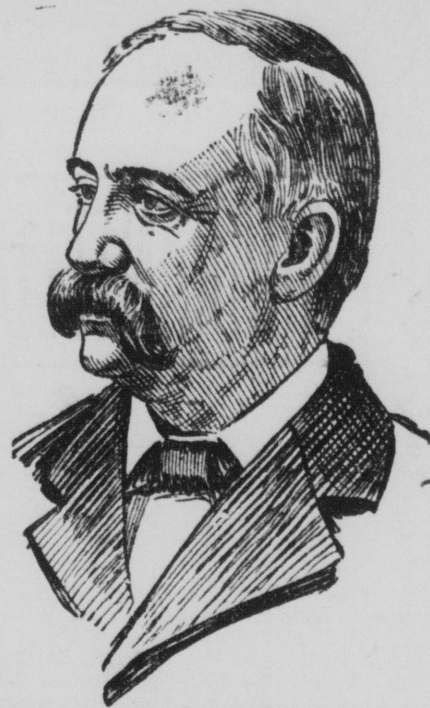

Lynching is denounced in unmeasured terms.

Victory for American arms in the war with Spain is declared to have brought the blessings of liberty to millions of human beings. The Republican principle that congress has power to govern the new possessions according to the needs of their people and in the interest of the people of the United States is declared to have been upheld by the supreme court.

President McKinley is lauded for "the prudent and successful management of American interests in China." It is declared that the national pledge to Cuba is being faithfully kept, insuring freedom and independence to her people, who, it is added, are today enjoying more prosperity than ever before. The Cubans are congratulated upon "wise and conservative action in favor of stable government."

Porto Rico is stated to be flourishing beyond all former experiences; Hawaii's entrance into full territorial relations with the United States government has been marked by the most marvelous progress known in the history of those islands. In the Philippines a "wicked insurrection has been suppressed," and "civil government, contemplating the largest practicable degree of home rule, has succeeded military control. Personal freedom, with an equality of rights heretofore to them unknown, is secured to every inhabitant."

All these things are declared to be due to the "patriotic and brilliant administration of President McKinley," who, in "facing unforeseen and grave responsibilities, has met them prudently, bravely and successfully."

Governor Nash's administration of the state government is declared to have been "wise, able, prudent, honest and economical."

Revision of State Tax Laws.

Revision of the state tax laws are favored in such a manner as shall require all classes of property to bear their just share. The creation of machinery for fixing and equalizing values is recommended. Alleged schemes to cast the entire burden of taxation upon real estate is denounced as unjust. Further legislation in the direction of increasing the state's revenue by forms of taxation other than by levies on real and personal property is also favored.

Full and cordial approval is extended to Senators Foraker and Hanna. Senator Foraker is declared to have rendered "splendid and conspicuous service in our country, and we earnestly endorse him for a second term."

The platform closes by again pledging loyal support to the principles of its declarations and to the party nominees.

Chairman Hanna, in his speech opening the convention, dwelt almost entirely upon the country's prosperity, urging that its continuance depended upon retaining the Republicans in power everywhere.

After eulogizing his colleague in the senate he insisted that the coming contest in Ohio was national in character. He reviewed the administrations of President McKinley, discussed the financial question, and insisted that the country demanded a continuance of confidence in the government in order to have continued prosperity. This is no time, he declared, for financial, industrial or other disturbances. He favored personal liberty, he said, so long as it shall not interfere with the public good.

Governor Nash, in accepting a renomination, reviewed especially the state's finances, declaring the Republican party has so administered them as to be entitled to a continuance in power.

SYMPATHY FOR SECRETARY HAY

Informal Expression of Hope by Cabinet That He Won't Resign.

Washington, June 26.—Official business at the cabinet meeting gave way to expressions of sympathy with Secretary Hay in his bereavement.

The president has received a letter from Secretary Hay stating that after the funeral of his son Adelbert he will return to New Hampshire with Mrs. Hay and remain there for a while. President McKinley has written a letter to Secretary Hay, expressing sympathy and urging him not to give way to his sorrow.

There was at the meeting an informal expression of hope that Colonel Hay will not resign, and should he suggest such a step both the president and the cabinet will advise against it.

Welland Had No Criminal Intent.

Berlin, June 26.—The official North German Gazette, referring to the decision of the imperial court of Leipzig not to prosecute Welland, explains that the public prosecutor and the court were satisfied that Welland was not actuated by criminal intent when he attacked his majesty at Bremen, in March last, and that the emperor was the "victim of a most remarkable concatenation of circumstances."

Owes His Life to Neighbor's Kindness

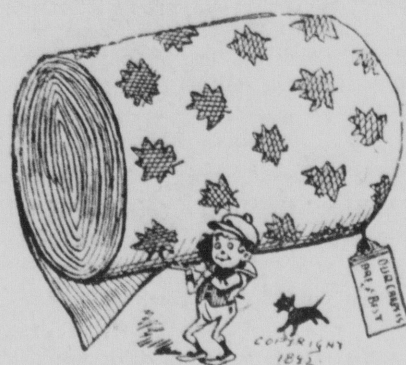

Mr. D. P. Daugherty, well known throughout Mercer and Sumner counties, W. Va., most likely owes his life to the kindness of a neighbor. He was almost hopelessly afflicted with diarrhoea, was attended by two physicians who gave him little, if any relief, when a neighbor learning of his serious condition, brought him a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, which cured him in less than 24 hours. VERY QUICK WORK

By the Columbus Convention In Naming a Republican Ticket.

A GOOD STRONG PLATFORM

Ohio Republican Convention Finished Its Work In Short Order—Hanna Cut Short His and Others' Speeches and Rushed Business.

Columbus, O., June 26.—The Republican state convention nominated the following ticket:

Governor—George K. Nash.
Lieutenant Governor—Carl L. Nippert.
Supreme Judge—J. L. Price.
Attorney General—John M. Sheets.
Clerk of the Supreme Court—Lawson E. Emerson.

State Treasurer—Isaac B. Cameron.
Member of Board of Public Works—W. G. Johnson.

The convention reconvened Tuesday from Monday, and was in session from about 10:10 a. m. to about 1:10 p. m. The intense heat was prostrating, and Chairman Hanna not only cut short his own speech, but also those of others, and then dispatched business with speed.

Quick Work In Convention.
In about three hours the convention nominated a full state ticket, adopted its declaration of principles, endorsed Joseph F. Foraker as the Republican candidate for re-election as United States senator, completed the party organization for the campaign, and transacted other business.

Of the seven nominations only three were new men, and one of these, Nippert, for lieutenant governor, was nominated without opposition, after Lieutenant Governor Caldwell had declined renomination. Nash, Sheets, Cameron and Johnson were renominated for second terms without opposition. There were free-for-all contests for the nomination for supreme judge and clerk of the supreme court.

It had been currently reported that Crew and Critchfield were on the Hanna slate for these two nominations, but Senator Hanna vigorously denied taking any part whatever in the contests for these two places. The vote showed that Price and Emerson had formed a combination that worked successfully for both of them.

Judge Price, of Lima, has been on the common pleas and circuit benches, and Emerson has been prominent in politics in Eastern Ohio for years.

The nomination that caused the most comment was that of Nippert in place of Lieutenant Governor Caldwell, the latter being the only one who was elected with Governor Nash two years ago that was not renominated for a second term. The State Anti-Saloon league caused Caldwell to run several thousand behind his ticket in 1899, and had vigorously opposed his nomination. There were frequent calls for Caldwell in the convention, but he could not be induced to take the platform. While the delegates were calling for Caldwell, Chairman Hanna made Caldwell a member of the committee to escort Governor Nash to the hall, to deliver his speech of acceptance, and while the committee was out Chairman Hanna promptly called up the next order of business and State Senator Nippert was nominated. Nippert has been principal of schools in Cincinnati and police prosecutor there.

Senator Foraker was accompanied last night to Cincinnati by a large delegation. Senator Hanna and Governor Nash went to Gambier, where they are to deliver addresses today at the commencement of Kenyon college.

What the Resolutions Contain.

The report of the resolutions committee, which was unanimously adopted by the convention as the platform of the party in Ohio, reaffirms the Philadelphia platform, pledges undivided support to the Republican party, the magnificent achievements of which, it is declared, have added lustre to American history and under the administration of which the United States has become a world power. Industry has revived, it is set forth; plenty has succeeded want, and our export trade now leads the world.

The gold standard is specifically endorsed. Further strengthening of the navy, legislation looking to the restoration of the merchant marine, the speedy construction of an American ship canal across the isthmus, are declared to be imperative needs.

In regard to combinations of capital the platform says:

"We recognize the right of both labor and capital to combine when such combinations are wisely administered for the general good, but combinations which create monopolies to control prices or limit production are an evil which must be met by effective legislation, vigorously enforced."

Congress is asked to renew the humane and reasonable laws and treaties for the continued protection of American labor. This has particular reference to the expiration of the 1902 act.

A ringing tribute is paid to the soldiers and sailors of Uncle Sam.

Attempts to deprive any citizen of his right to vote under the constitution is denounced, and the demand is made that representation in congress and in the electoral college shall be based on the actual voting population, proportionate reduction being made for any state in which the right of suffrage shall be denied, except for crime.

Lynching is denounced in unmeasured terms.

Victory for American arms in the war with Spain is declared to have brought the blessings of liberty to millions of human beings. The Republican principle that congress has power to govern the new possessions according to the needs of their people and in the interest of the people of the United States is declared to have been upheld by the supreme court.

President McKinley is lauded for "the prudent and successful management of American interests in China." It is declared that the national pledge to Cuba is being faithfully kept, insuring freedom and independence to her people, who, it is added, are today enjoying more prosperity than ever before. The Cubans are congratulated upon "wise and conservative action in favor of stable government."

Porto Rico is stated to be flourishing beyond all former experiences; Hawaii's entrance into full territorial relations with the United States government has been marked by the most marvelous progress known in the history of those islands. In the Philippines a "wicked insurrection has been suppressed," and "civil government, contemplating the largest practicable degree of home rule, has succeeded military control. Personal freedom, with an equality of rights heretofore to them unknown, is secured to every inhabitant."

All these things are declared to be due to the "patriotic and brilliant administration of President McKinley," who, in "facing unforeseen and grave responsibilities, has met them prudently, bravely and successfully."

Governor Nash's administration of the state government is declared to have been "wise, able, prudent, honest and economical."

Revision of State Tax Laws.

Revision of the state tax laws are favored in such a manner as shall require all classes of property to bear their just share. The creation of machinery for fixing and equalizing values is recommended. Alleged schemes to cast the entire burden of taxation upon real estate is denounced as unjust. Further legislation in the direction of increasing the state's revenue by forms of taxation other than by levies on real and personal property is also favored.

Full and cordial approval is extended to Senators Foraker and Hanna. Senator Foraker is declared to have rendered "splendid and conspicuous service in our country, and we earnestly endorse him for a second term."

The platform closes by again pledging loyal support to the principles of its declarations and to the party nominees.

Chairman Hanna, in his speech opening the convention, dwelt almost entirely upon the country's prosperity, urging that its continuance depended upon retaining the Republicans in power everywhere.

After eulogizing his colleague in the senate he insisted that the coming contest in Ohio was national in character. He reviewed the administrations of President McKinley, discussed the financial question, and insisted that the country demanded a continuance of confidence in the government in order to have continued prosperity. This is no time, he declared, for financial, industrial or other disturbances. He favored personal liberty, he said, so long as it shall not interfere with the public good.

Governor Nash, in accepting a renomination, reviewed especially the state's finances, declaring the Republican party has so administered them as to be entitled to a continuance in power.

SYMPATHY FOR SECRETARY HAY

Informal Expression of Hope by Cabinet That He Won't Resign.

Washington, June 26.—Official business at the cabinet meeting gave way to expressions of sympathy with Secretary Hay in his bereavement.

The president has received a letter from Secretary Hay stating that after the funeral of his son Adelbert he will return to New Hampshire with Mrs. Hay and remain there for a while. President McKinley has written a letter to Secretary Hay, expressing sympathy and urging him not to give way to his sorrow.

There was at the meeting an informal expression of hope that Colonel Hay will not resign, and should he suggest such a step both the president and the cabinet will advise against it.

Welland Had No Criminal Intent.

Berlin, June 26.—The official North German Gazette, referring to the decision of the imperial court of Leipzig not to prosecute Welland, explains that the public prosecutor and the court were satisfied that Welland was not actuated by criminal intent when he attacked his majesty at Bremen, in March last, and that the emperor was the "victim of a most remarkable consanation of circumstances."

The gold standard is specifically endorsed. Further strengthening of the navy, legislation looking to the restoration of the merchant marine, the speedy construction of an American ship canal across the isthmus, are declared to be imperative needs.

In regard to combinations of capital the platform says:

"We recognize the right of both labor and capital to combine when such combinations are wisely administered for the general good, but combinations which create monopolies to control prices or limit production are an evil which must be met by effective legislation, vigorously enforced."

Congress is asked to renew the humane and reasonable laws and treaties for the continued protection of American labor. This has particular reference to the expiration of the act.

A ringing tribute is paid to the soldiers and sailors of Uncle Sam.

Attempts to deprive any citizen of his right to vote under the constitution is denounced, and the demand is made that representation in congress and in the electoral college shall be based on the actual voting population, proportionate reduction being made for any state in which the right of suffrage shall be denied, except for crime.

Lynching is denounced in unmeasured terms.

Victory for American arms in the war with Spain is declared to have brought the blessings of liberty to millions of human beings. The Republican principle that congress has power to govern the new possessions according to the needs of their people and in the interest of the people of the United States is declared to have been upheld by the supreme court. President McKinley is lauded for "the prudent and successful management of American interests in China." It is declared that the national pledge to Cuba is being faithfully kept, insuring freedom and independence to her people, who, it is added, are today enjoying more prosperity than ever before. The Cubans are congratulated upon "wise and conservative action in favor of stable government."

Porto Rico is stated to be flourishing beyond all former experiences; Hawaii's entrance into full territorial relations with the United States government has been marked by the most marvelous progress known in the history of those islands. In the Philippines a "wicked insurrection has been suppressed," and "civil government, contemplating the largest practicable degree of home rule, has succeeded military control. Personal freedom, with an equality of rights heretofore to them unknown, is secured to every inhabitant."

All these things are declared to be due to the "patriotic and brilliant administration of President McKinley," who, in "facing unforeseen and grave responsibilities, has met them prudently, bravely and successfully."

Governor Nash's administration of the state government is declared to have been "wise, able, prudent, honest and economical."

Revision of State Tax Laws.

Revision of the state tax laws are favored in such a manner as shall require all classes of property to bear their just share. The creation of machinery for fixing and equalizing values is recommended. Alleged schemes to cast the entire burden of taxation upon real estate is denounced as unjust. Further legislation in the direction of increasing the state's revenue by forms of taxation other than by levies on real and personal property is also favored.

Full and cordial approval is extended to Senators Foraker and Hanna. Senator Foraker is declared to have rendered "splendid and conspicuous service in our country, and we earnestly endorse him for a second term."

The platform closes by again pledging loyal support to the principles of its declarations and to the party nominees.

Chairman Hanna, in his speech opening the convention, dwelt almost entirely upon the country's prosperity, urging that its continuance depended upon retaining the Republicans in power everywhere.

After eulogizing his colleague in the senate he insisted that the coming contest in Ohio was national in character. He reviewed the administrations of President McKinley, discussed the financial question, and insisted that the country demanded a continuance of confidence in the government in order to have continued prosperity. This is no time, he declared, for financial, industrial or other disturbances. He favored personal liberty, he said, so long as it shall not interfere with the public good.

SYMPATHY FOR SECRETARY HAY

Informal Expression of Hope by Cabinet That He Won't Resign.

Washington, June 26.—Official business at the cabinet meeting gave way to expressions of sympathy with Secretary Hay in his bereavement.

The president has received a letter from Secretary Hay stating that after the funeral of his son Adelbert he will return to New Hampshire with Mrs. Hay and remain there for a while. President McKinley has written a letter to Secretary Hay, expressing sympathy and urging him not to give way to his sorrow.

There was at the meeting an informal expression of hope that Colonel Hay will not resign, and should he suggest such a step both the president and the cabinet will advise against it.

Welland Had No Criminal Intent.

Berlin, June 26.—The official North German Gazette, referring to the decision of the imperial court of Leipzig not to prosecute Welland, explains that the public prosecutor and the court were satisfied that Welland was not actuated by criminal intent when he attacked his majesty at Bremen, in March last, and that the emperor was the "victim of a most remarkable consanation of circumstances."

Owes His Life to Neighbor's Kindness

Mr. D. P. Daugherty, well known throughout Mercer and Sumner counties, W. Va., most likely owes his life to the kindness of a neighbor. He was almost hopelessly afflicted with diarrhoea, was attended by two physicians who gave him little, if any relief, when neighbor learning of his serious condition, brought him a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, which cured him in less than 24 hours. THE CONVENTION'S WORK.

The Republicans of Ohio are to be congratulated upon the work performed in their state convention. A ticket composed of the best and ablest Republicans in Ohio was placed in nomination and a platform without a single weak plank was adopted. The ticket is an invincible one, and the declaration of principles will receive the hearty endorsement of every true Republican.

Lieutenant Governor Caldwell, against whom some opposition was manifested, took the wise and manly course of declaring himself out of the race and the place on the ticket, which could have been his had he desired it. Was filled by a young Republican of the highest standing and best character from the lieutenant governor's home city. Thus all possible chance for disaffection and dissatisfaction was removed, and every candidate upon the ticket is sure of a good, round majority at the polls in November.

The campaign is to be fought on Republican principles, which the enemy have challenged, and there can be no fear for the result. Let every Republican do his duty from now until election day is past, and demonstrate to the nation that the grand old Buckeye state allows none to surpass it in loyalty to a progressive national administration or in devotion to the best interests of the whole people.

THE GARBAGE QUESTION.

The garbage question, discussed in interviews in another column, is one that the council and health authorities should give immediate attention. The practice of allowing decaying refuse to stand in open receptacles, on streets and in alleys, during hot weather, is one that cannot be too strongly condemned or too quickly suppressed. There seems to be an urgent demand for an ordinance, such as is in force in other cities, compelling the use of garbage cans with covers, which should be made as nearly airtight as possible. Certainly the noisome odors which now arise in many parts of the city should not be suffered to continue, to breed epidemics during the hot weather.

OHIO RIVER WATER.

Wellsville has found out what her hydrant water contains, but we don't know that she is any happier for it. Such information is of the sort that a learned man of old must have had in mind when he said: "He that increaseth knowledge increaseth sorrow." Wellsville water, according to the state chemist, contains sediment—no microscopic examination necessary to determine that fact—and other things. There are albuminoid, nitrates and nitrites, incrusting constituents and solids in it. There are also what the small boys term "wiggles," these forming 2,300 parts in a million. That means, if we understand the chemist's lingo, not the number of wiggles, which must be legion, but the mass of them. A million tons of water would contain 2,300 tons of wiggles. And yet a Wellsville contemporary solemnly asserts that "Wellsville drinks the hydrant water undiluted." The wonder is that there is any Wellsville on the map. East Liverpool water would prob-

bly stand analysis no better than that pumped from the river below. But East Liverpool knows better than to drink it. It is bad enough to be constrained to use the stuff to wash in. Down the river still further, the chemist shows, the wiggles increase. At Gallipolis the proportion of bacteria in the liquids and solids is 7,500 parts in a million. Gallipolis gets rid of all these except 23 parts by filtration. The chemist's table carries its moral so plainly on its face that it is quite unnecessary to tell East Liverpool and Wellsville what they ought to do. Will they do it, or continue to use their reservoirs and water systems as propagating grounds for bacteria and disease?

Columns were printed in advance in Democratic newspapers about the big fights that were to be settled at the Ohio Republican convention. There was not the remotest sign of anything but harmony throughout the whole proceedings. Of course Democrats were disappointed, but that is their usual lot. They can't make their predictions of evil regarding the Republican party come true.

The convention at Lisbon on Tuesday furnished the annual reminder that the Democratic party is still struggling to maintain an existence in Columbiana county.

ODOROUS GARBAGE

CAUSES COMPLAINT IN NUMEROUS QUARTERS.

Health Officer in Favor of a Rule Requiring Air-Tight Garbage Cans.

Complaints in great profusion are coming from all parts of the city relative to the disposition of garbage which is thrown into barrels and other receptacles and left in the back yards of residences and about the business houses of the city.

Since summer has come for a certainty and the rays of the shining sun have started the buds and blossoms to sending forth their fragrant aroma, it is not to the liking of a large number of citizens to have these odiferous perfumes blighted by the stench arising from putrid swill cans.

The one great fault that has given rise to the prevailing dissatisfaction regarding the manner in which garbage is disposed of is the neglect of the drivers of the garbage wagon in making their "collections" with necessary regularity. The attention of Sanitary Officer Burgess has been called in a number of instances to unclosed depositories, piled high with disease breeding offal, and allowed to remain as long as two weeks at a time without being emptied, until the heat of the sun had veritably converted them into boiling caldrons of putrescence.

Those who have been exposed to the obnoxious aroma of these poisonous receptacles say there is a vast difference between the smell arising therefrom and that coming from a field of new mown hay. The sanitary officer vouches for the statement that one or two of the swill barrels about town have driven dogs from the neighborhood.

However, it is perhaps unjust to lay the blame for these conditions on the garbage furnace people. While it cannot be disputed that they have neglected in numerous cases to collect the refuse twice a week, as they are supposed to do, the fact that the drivers of the wagon have been having more work on hand than can properly be attended to, accounts for the apparent carelessness. Another wagon is needed badly, and if it is put in use less grumbling would be heard.

During the summer season it does not require much time for a garbage barrel or can to become "ripe," and when it does reach maturity there is nothing so repulsive to the human nostrils. Not only is the odor obnoxious, but physicians say there is nothing which is more likely to breed disease.

Several doctors have already denounced the methods employed in this city in the disposition of garbage. It has been suggested and approved by Sanitary Officer Burgess that, for the present garbage depositories, covered, air-tight receptacles should be substituted. It would perhaps necessitate the passage of an ordinance by council to institute in a general way this new measure of reform, but if it were done the entire populace, with very few exceptions, would sanction the move and consider that a long felt want had thus been filled.

Even on the main streets of the city it is not an uncommon thing to get a whiff of a slop can, and a stranger walking along these exposed thoroughfares could not be criticised for escaping, even to Wellsville.

New Menagerie Features.

Ringling Brothers have many new and notable zoological specimens this season, among others a half dozen Royal Bengal tigers, a pair of rare black tigers, a horned horse or gnu, a bi-horned rhinoceros, a pair of Nile-born hippopotami, and 30 trained elephants. In East Liverpool July 5,

The Local Potteries.

It was learned last evening that negotiations were pending through the main office of the Union Potteries company at Pittsburgh for the purchase of the Steubenville pottery, which, if the efforts are successful, will be added to the two plants already owned by the company.

An effort was made to ascertain the truth of the matter, but the office force at the Union could give no definite information, as the business of the concern is conducted through the Pittsburgh office, and the East Liverpool office would have no means of knowing what was pending until the deal had been consummated. However, it is stated on good authority that the propositions now pending for the purchase of the Ford City, Toronto and Steubenville plants are being favorably considered by the several firms.

The Steubenville plant is a seven-kiln pottery employing about 150 men, and has recently been operated steadily.

It is thought the plans of the company will be carried out as they have been planned, and in case they are the Union Potteries company will have a kiln capacity as follows: Union, East

Liverpool, 4 kilns; American, Toronto, 7 kilns; Chelsea, Cumberland, 8 kilns; Steubenville, 7 kilns; Ford City, 18 kilns; total 44 kilns.

S. N. McCarthy, representing the Commoner and Glassworker, of Pittsburgh, was in the city today assisting Mr. Gallaher, the local agent, in completing the details for East Liverpool's share in the special edition of that paper, which it is proposed to issue as a convention number. Mr. McCarthy is one of the best authorities on labor matters in the United States.

Local union No. 9 held an important meeting last evening at which the books of the organization were examined by the auditing committee, as is the custom each year. Everything was found to be in satisfactory condition, and the local's treasury prosperous.

Local union No. 48, warehousemen, has secured new quarters and now meet every Wednesday evening. At the meeting tonight there are four new members to initiate, and three applications to act upon.

HORSEWHIPPED HIM

AKRON PUBLISHER ATTACKED BY YOUNG MEN.

An Alleged Libel in His Paper—His Assaults Arrested Promptly.

Akron, O., June 26.—Albert G. Work, S. H. Kohler and George C. Kohler, young married men, society leaders and wealthy, unmercifully horsewhipped Samuel A. Kennedy, publisher of the Amusement Record, at his home at midnight Monday night. Kennedy is a mass of welts, gashes and bruises. His head is cut open in a dozen places and his back is raw as a beefsteak. His assailants drove to the police station and furnished bond for their appearance this morning.

All last week a sensational rumor concerning the Work and Kohler families was in circulation. Kennedy, it is alleged, tried to sell his silence, but could not. Saturday he published a confirmation of the scandal, which is said to be absolutely false. Last night George C. Kohler called Kennedy to the door at his home on Tallmadge avenue, and S. H. Kohler and Work seized him and for 15 minutes beat him with riding whips.

A special grand jury is in session to pass on the publication made by Kennedy. He is charged with criminal libel. Private detectives claim to have found the source from which the story emanated, and this also is being investigated.

Work is superintendent of the Goodrich Rubber company, and worth half a million. S. H. Kohler is vice president of the Akron Varnish company, G. C. Kohler is an attorney. They are sons of Judge J. A. Kohler. They pleaded guilty to assault and battery in police court, and were held in $500 bond until Kennedy is able to appear against them.

How They Broke Up.

An amusing story is related in "Canadian Savage Folk" of the manner in which an adjournment was taken by a mass meeting. A missionary who had started a school among the Indians met with opposition, and the meeting had been called in support of the rival scheme.

There were several speakers who denounced the school in existence. We replied vigorously, showing the efficiency of the school and denouncing in turn the methods adopted by the opposition. An Indian chief produced some specimens of work done at the school, and several speakers supported the work as it was being done. The climax was reached when a gentleman rose and said:

"I move the whole thing bust!"
The chairman put the motion.
"It is moved and seconded that the whole thing bust!"
The audience sprang to their feet and, waving hats, yelled "Busted!" and made for the door. Thus ended the first and last opposition in that matter.

JEFFERSON AT SEVENTY.

The Great Comedian Seems to Have Found Fount of Perpetual Youth.

"In Florida, where Ponce de Leon failed to discover the fountain of perpetual youth, Joseph Jefferson seems to have found it," declares James S. Metcalfe in The Ladies' Home Journal for July. "He is a picturesque figure. His ruddy cheeks and bright eyes give the lie to his 72 years. He is slender, but not with the leanness of age. His hair, mostly black, streaked only here and there with gray and in length showing a wholesome contempt for the fine art of the barber, blows about in the breeze. His fingers are as quick and deft at knotting a line or adjusting a sinker as those of a boy on the banks of a stream, and he enters into every detail with boyish enjoyment. His fishing he alternates with landscape painting, writing and the care of plants."

"In none of these pursuits does he claim professional skill, but he brings to them something more than professional zest. Mr. Jefferson is a very abstemious man. In eating, as in other things, except occupation in the open air, he evidently believes in moderation as a means to well living and long living. He did not join in our after lunch smoke, stating that if he had not given up tobacco a good many years ago he felt sure that he would not be with us now. Whatever the secret of his long and useful life, it is safe to say that every one of his countless friends and admirers would be glad to lengthen it by a fulfillment of his own Rip's favorite benediction, 'Here's his health and his family's, and may they live long and prosper.'"

It Rained Copper.

The cadets of Annapolis sat in the side aisles of the chapel, leaving the center aisles for the officers and their families, says Dr. Cyrus Townsend Brady in "Under Tops'is and Tents."

When the offering was received, the two boys charged with the duty of passing the plates did not make the slightest effort to circulate them among the cadets, for we never had any money. They would walk rapidly down the aisle and then come deliberately up the middle, gathering thence what they could. One Sunday the chaplain announced that he would preach a missionary sermon the next Sunday. It did not have the ordinary effect in emptying the church, for we were obliged to go as usual.

During the week it occurred to the bright mind of a senior, or first class man, who is now a prominent New York financier, that it would be well for the cadets to make an offering. So he sent out to the bank on Saturday morning and succeeded in smuggling in over 300 copper cents, which he distributed 1 cent per boy to the Episcopal battalion. We stationed a strong, long armed man on the outside seat of the first pew in each aisle.

The chaplain made a piteous appeal for pennies even, and when the astonished cadets who passed the plates started on their perfunctory promenade the strong, one armed man aforesaid promptly relieved them of the metal plates, and each one dropped in one copper cent with an ominous crash and then deliberately handed the plate to the next boy, who did the same thing. It rained copper cents for about ten minutes. The chaplain was dreadfully disconcerted, the officers fidgeted and looked agast. Some of them laughed, and the cadets preserved a deadly solemnity. The affair was a striking success.

Optimism.

When the optimist was dispossessed and thrown, along with his household impedimenta, into the cold street, he chuckled furiously.

"Why do you laugh, my friend?" inquired a passerby.

"Because I have just now been emancipated from toil," replied the optimist. "For years my life has been one long struggle to keep the wolf from the door. But now that I have been deprived of the door I no longer am compelled to toil. Sweet, indeed, are the uses of adversity!"

THE CONVENTION'S WORK.

The Republicans of Ohio are to be congratulated upon the work performed in their state convention. A ticket composed of the best and ablest Republicans in Ohio was placed in nomination and a platform without a single weak plank was adopted. The ticket is an invincible one, and the declaration of principles will receive the hearty endorsement of every true Republican.

Lieutenant Governor Caldwell, against whom some opposition was manifested, took the wise and mainly course of declaring himself out of the race and the place on the ticket, which could have been his had he desired it. It was filled by a young Republican of the highest standing and best character from the lieutenant governor's home city. Thus all possible chance for disaffection and dissatisfaction was removed, and every candidate upon the ticket is sure of a good, round majority at the polls in November.

The campaign is to be fought on Republican principles, which the enemy have challenged, and there can be no fear for the result. Let every Republican do his duty from now until election day is past, and demonstrate to the nation that the grand old Buckeye state allows none to surpass it in loyalty to a progressive national administration or in devotion to the best interests of the whole people.

THE GARBAGE QUESTION.

The garbage question, discussed in interviews in another column, is one that the council and health authorities should give immediate attention. The practice of allowing decaying refuse to stand in open receptacles, on streets and in alleys, during hot weather, is one that cannot be too strongly condemned or too quickly suppressed. There seems to be an urgent demand for an ordinance, such as is in force in other cities, compelling the use of garbage cans with covers, which should be made as nearly airtight as possible. Certainly the noisome odors which now arise in many parts of the city should not be suffered to continue, to breed epidemics during the hot weather.

OHIO RIVER WATER.

Wellsville has found out what her hydrant water contains, but we don't know that she is any happier for it. Such information is of the sort that a learned man of old must have had in mind when he said: "He that increaseth knowledge increaseth sorrow." Wellsville water, according to the state chemist, contains sediment—no microscopic examination necessary to determine that fact—and other things. There are albuminoid, nitrates and nitrites, incrusting constituents and solids in it. There are also what the small boys term "wiggles," these forming 2,300 parts in a million. That means, if we understand the chemist's lingo, not the number of wiggles, which must be legion, but the mass of them. A million tons of water would contain 2,300 tons of wiggles. And yet a Wellsville contemporary solemnly asserts that "Wellsville drinks the hydrant water undiluted." The wonder is that there is any Wellsville on the map. East Liverpool water would prob-

bly stand analysis no better than that pumped from the river below. But East Liverpool knows better than to drink it. It is had enough to be constrained to use the stuff to wash in. Down the river still further, the chemist shows, the wiggles increase. At Gallipolis the proportion of bacteria in the liquids and solids is 7,500 parts in a million. Gallipolis gets rid of all these except 23 parts by filtration. The chemist's table carries its moral so plainly on its face that it is quite unnecessary to tell East Liverpool and Wellsville what they ought to do. Will they do it, or continue to use their reservoirs and water systems as propagating grounds for bacteria and disease?

Columns were printed in advance in Democratic newspapers about the big fights that were to be settled at the Ohio Republican convention. There was not the remotest sign of anything but harmony throughout the whole proceedings. Of course Democrats were disappointed, but that is their usual lot. They can't make their predictions of evil regarding the Republican party come true.

The convention at Lisbon on Tuesday furnished the annual reminder that the Democratic party is still struggling to maintain an existence in Columbiana county.

ODOROUS GARBAGE

CAUSES COMPLAINT IN NUMEROUS QUARTERS.

Health Officer in Favor of a Rule Requiring Air-Tight Garbage Cans.

Complaints in great profusion are coming from all parts of the city relative to the disposition of garbage which is thrown into barrels and other receptacles and left in the back yards of residences and about the business houses of the city.

Since summer has come for a certainty and the rays of the shining sun have started the buds and blossoms to sending forth their fragrant aroma, it is not to the liking of a large number of citizens to have these odiferous perfumes blighted by the stench arising from putrid will cans.

The one great fault that has given rise to the prevailing dissatisfaction regarding the manner in which garbage is disposed of is the neglect of the drivers of the garbage wagon in making their "collections" with necessary regularity. The attention of Sanitary Officer Burgess has been called in a number of instances to unclosed depositories, piled high with disease breeding offal, and allowed to remain as long as two weeks at a time without being emptied, until the heat of the sun had veritably converted them into boiling caldrons of putrescence.

Those who have been exposed to the obnoxious aroma of these poisonous receptacles say there is a vast difference between the smell arising therefrom and that coming from a field of new mown hay. The sanitary officer vouches for the statement that one or two of the swill barrels about town have driven dogs from the neighborhood.

However, it is perhaps unjust to lay the blame for these conditions on the garbage furnace people. While it cannot be disputed that they have neglected in numerous cases to collect the refuse twice a week, as they are supposed to do, the fact that the drivers of the wagon have been having more work on hand than can properly be attended to, accounts for the apparent carelessness. Another wagon is needed badly, and if it is put in use less grumbling would be heard.

During the summer season it does not require much time for a garbage barrel or can to become "ripe," and when it does reach maturity there is nothing so repulsive to the human nostrils. Not only is the odor obnoxious, but physicians say there is nothing which is more likely to breed disease.

Several doctors have already denounced the methods employed in this city in the disposition of garbage. It has been suggested and approved by Sanitary Officer Burgess that, for the present garbage depositories, covered, air-tight receptacles should be substituted. It would perhaps necessitate the passage of an ordinance by council to institute in a general way this new measure of reform, but if it were done the entire populace, with very few exceptions, would sanction the move and consider that a long felt want had thus been filled.

Even on the main streets of the city it is not an uncommon thing to get a whiff of a slop can, and a stranger walking along these exposed thoroughfares could not be criticised for escaping, even to Wellsville.

New Menagerie Features.

Gleanings Of a Day In and About The Local Potteries.

It was learned last evening that negotiations were pending through the main office of the Union Potteries company at Pittsburg for the purchase of the Steubenville pottery, which, if the efforts are successful, will be added to the two plants already owned by the company.

An effort was made to ascertain the truth of the matter, but the office force at the Union could give no definite information, as the business of the concern is conducted through the Pittsburg office, and the East Liverpool office would have no means of knowing what was pending until the deal had been consummated. However, it is stated on good authority that the propositions now pending for the purchase of the Ford City, Toronto and Steubenville plants are being favorably considered by the several firms.

It is thought the plans of the company will be carried out as they have been planned, and in case they are the Union Potteries company will have a kiln capacity as follows: Union, East

Liverpool, 4 kilns; American, Toronto, 7 kilns; Chelsea, Cumberland, 8 kilns; Steubenville, 7 kilns; Ford City, 18 kilns; total 44 kilns.

S. N. McCarthy, representing the Commoner and Glassworker, of Pittsburg, was in the city today assisting Mr. Gallaher, the local agent, in completing the details for East Liverpool's share in the special edition of that paper, which it is proposed to issue as a convention number. Mr. McCarthy is one of the best authorities on labor matters in the United States.

Local union No. 9 held an important meeting last evening at which the books of the organization were examined by the auditing committee, as is the custom each year. Everything was found to be in satisfactory condition, and the local's treasury prosperous.

Local union No. 48, warehousemen, has secured new quarters and now meet every Wednesday evening. At the meeting tonight there are four new members to initiate, and three applications to act upon.

HORSEWHIPPED HIM

AKRON PUBLISHER ATTACKED BY YOUNG MEN.

An Alleged Libel in His Paper—His Assaults Arrested Promptly.

Akron, O., June 26.—Albert G. Work, S. H. Kohler and George C. Kohler, young married men, society leaders and wealthy, unmercifully horsewhipped Samuel A. Kennedy, publisher of the Amusement Record, at his home at midnight Monday night. Kennedy is a mass of welts, gashes and bruises. His head is cut open in a dozen places and his back is raw as a beefsteak. His assailants drove to the police station and furnished bond for their appearance this morning.

All last week a sensational rumor concerning the Work and Kohler families was in circulation. Kennedy, it is alleged, tried to sell his silence, but could not. Saturday he published a confirmation of the scandal, which is said to be absolutely false. Last night George C. Kohler called Kennedy to the door at his home on Tallmadge avenue, and S. H. Kohler and Work seized him and for 15 minutes beat him with riding whips.

A special grand jury is in session to pass on the publication made by Kennedy. He is charged with criminal libel. Private detectives claim to have found the source from which the story emanated, and this also is being investigated.

Work is superintendent of the Goodrich Rubber company, and worth half a million. S. H. Kohler is vice president of the Akron Varnish company. G. C. Kohler is an attorney. They are sons of Judge J. A. Kohler. They pleaded guilty to assault and battery in police court, and were held in $500 bond until Kennedy is able to appear against them.

How They Broke Up.

An amusing story is related in "Canadian Savage Folk" of the manner in which an adjournment was taken by a mass meeting. A missionary who had started a school among the Indians met with opposition, and the meeting had been called in support of the rival scheme.

There were several speakers who denounced the school in existence. We replied vigorously, showing the efficiency of the school and denouncing in turn the methods adopted by the opposition. An Indian chief produced some specimens of work done at the school, and several speakers supported the work as it was being done. The climax was reached when a gentleman rose and said:

"I move the whole thing bust!" The chairman put the motion. "It is moved and seconded that the whole thing bust!" The audience sprang to their feet and, waving hats, yelled "Busted!" and made for the door. Thus ended the first and last opposition in that matter.

JEFFERSON AT SEVENTY.

The Great Comedian Seems to Have Found Fountain of Perpetual Youth.

"In Florida, where Ponce de Leon failed to discover the fountain of perpetual youth, Joseph Jefferson seems to have found it," declares James S. Metcalfe in The Ladies' Home Journal for July. "He is a picturesque figure. His ruddy cheeks and bright eyes give the lie to his 72 years. He is slender, but not with the leanness of age. His hair, mostly black, streaked only here and there with gray and in length showing a wholesome contempt for the fine art of the barber, blows about in the breeze. His fingers are as quick and deft at knotting a line or adjusting a sinker as those of a boy on the banks of a stream, and he enters into every detail with boyish enjoyment. His fishing he alternates with landscape painting, writing and the care of plants.

"In none of these pursuits does he claim professional skill, but he brings to them something more than professional zest. Mr. Jefferson is a very abstemious man. In eating, as in other things, except occupation in the open air, he evidently believes in moderation as a means to well living and long living. He did not join in our after-lunch smoke, stating that if he had not given up tobacco a good many years ago he felt sure that he would not be with us now. Whatever the secret of his long and useful life, it is safe to say that every one of his countless friends and admirers would be glad to lengthen it by a fulfillment of his own Rip's favorite benediction, 'Here's his health and his family's, and may they live long and prosper.'"

appeared on the scene and took Smith in charge. The prisoner was turned over to Officers Dawson and Aufderheide and taken to jail. The policemen were not then aware that Smith had attempted to cut Oleson, and he was given his liberty by putting up $10 security for his appearance before the mayor. He took his departure and when the officers learned of the man's crime he was not to be found.

J. C. Morgan, another colored man from Pittsburg, was arrested by Officers Dawson and Aufderheide for fighting in Hancock's saloon on Second street. He was locked up and this morning received a fine of $5 and costs. Morgan had no money, but claimed to be in the employ of a Pittsburg attorney, who, he said, would pay his fine. Mayor Davidson telephoned to the address furnished him by Morgan and received the assurance that the prisoner's fine would be paid. Morgan was given sufficient money to buy him a ticket to Pittsburg and he left on the noon train.

A fight took place at the corner of Union and Third streets soon after the noon hour, in which two colored women participated. One received an ugly wound over one of her eyes and had her clothing covered with blood.

Two women on the Southside got into a similar mixup in the morning and pommelled each other until friends separated them. Both received some bad cuts and bruises.

One negro was reported to have received 30 cuts from a razor in a fight in Chester.

A report was circulated just before the excursion train left that a colored man had received fatal injuries as the result of a fight which took place near the corner of Broadway and Cook street. This was an error, although a fight did take place there in which one darkey got knocked down a pair of steps and badly hurt.

There were perhaps a score or more of minor "scraps." Scores of women became reeling drunk and many of them had to be almost carried from the saloons in which they had been drinking.

BANK FAILURE IN GERMANY

Had Some Effect on the Stock Market Tuesday—Influence of Some Other Features.

New York, June 26.—Prices of stocks reacted sharply Tuesday and were carried down under such active selling as has not been seen in the market for several weeks past. This development did not make itself felt until late in the day, and after such a period of neglect and apathy on the part of speculative and investment interests as in itself invites to attack on prices by professional bears. There was a continual slight dribble of stocks on the market, under which prices slowly but pretty steadily yielded, except for a few special cases where desultory speculation for the rise centered, or where buying was induced by causes individual to stocks. These were entirely without influence on the general list. A rather general tendency to recover from some opening declines had the edge taken off it by the first bulletin announcement of the suspension of an important bank in Leipzig. The course of German bank shares for the last few days has indicated an unsettled condition of affairs in Germany, and Tuesday's occurrence arouses apprehension that the coming semi-annual settlements in Berlin may be the occasion of a more or less extended collapse.

With the gain in cash this week and the receipt next week of the New York gold shipments, the banks' cash reserves will be lifted to near $250,000,000. The banks' outstanding note issues are also nearly $100,000,000 below the legal maximum exempt from taxation. So that the German money market is unusually well equipped to meet a crisis. The consideration of these conditions made the speculative mind sensitive, and late in the day, when many rumors began to circulate of local banking troubles, there was a lively spilling out of stocks all through the list. The bears made the most of their unexpected opportunity and offered prices down boldly while the rumors were at the high tide of exaggeration. They succeeded in breaking through the defenses which had been established by the bull leaders while they were away for their vacations and stop loss orders were uncovered. Stocks with any large speculative accounts in them were naturally most affected. St. Paul and Missouri Pacific were conspicuous in the decline, as were a number of less prominent stocks which were marked up in the early dealings Tuesday. The drop in St. Paul extended to five points. When the nature of the investigation being made by the clearing house association of the affairs between one of the banks and the association became more accurately known and it was announced that no action would be necessary there was a lively scramble on the part of professional shorts to cover, and the rally in the principal active stocks was between one and two points. St. Paul recovered 2½, Missouri Pacific 2¼ and Manhattan 2¼. But the closing was not free from feverishness and was rather irregular. The money market was not disturbed, the somewhat easier tone of Monday being maintained. The earlier gains in the market were from causes peculiar to the stocks affected, such as has been the move of these movements for several days past.

The bond market was affected by the late selling, but in a much less degree than stocks. Total sales, par value, $2,770,000.

THE PLAGUE IN HONOLULU.

Four Cases Reported—Corbin May Not Land There, but Go on to Manila.

Washington, June 26.—In view of a dispatch received at the war department from General Shafter, at San Francisco, reporting four deaths from the bubonic plague at Honolulu, between May 29 and June 9, Assistant Secretary Sanger has telegraphed General Shafter to confer with General Corbin, and, if it is deemed desirable, to coal the Hancock so as to sail direct through to Manila. It was the intention of General Corbin, who is to sail for Manila on the Hancock, to stop at Honolulu and make an examination of Camp McKinley at that point, but the bubonic plague report may change his plans.

According to General Shafter's message, the president of the Honolulu board of health believes he has the plague situation well in hand.

Bedford, Pa., June 26.—The seventh annual meeting of the Pennsylvania Bar association was held in the ballroom of the Bedford Springs hotel, about 300 members being present. The meeting was called to order at 10 a. m. The president of the association, William Scott, of Pittsburg, made an address, during the course of which he scored the "ripper" bill, declaring that the existence of such an unlimited power in the legislature in regard to municipalities is liable to gross abuse, and suggesting some limitation by constitutional amendment.

Special committee reports were made by E. Z. Smith and Thomas Patterson, of Pittsburg. A minute was presented to the association on the death of Edward P. Allison, of Philadelphia, the first secretary of the association, to whom Judge Simonton, of Dauphin county, Samuel Dickson, and William Penn Lloyd paid tributes. Ex-Attorney General W. U. Hensel, of Lancaster, presented the portrait of Mr. Allison to the association, given by Mr. Allison's wife and family, which President Scott received. A minute of respect and appreciation was then adopted.

The annual address was made last evening by H. M. Rose, of Arkansas.

A Task.

To be honest, to be kind, to earn a little and to spend less, to make, upon the whole, a family happier by his presence, to renounce where that shall be necessary and not to be imbibed, to keep a few friends, but these without capitulation; above all, on the same grim conditions to keep friends with himself—here is a task for all that a man has of fortitude and delicacy.—Robert Louis Stevenson.

SOUTH SIDE SCHOOL PICNIC

BROUGHT 2,500 VISITORS FROM PITTSBURG TODAY.

The Big Crowd Is Enjoying Itself
at the Rock Springs Resort.

The pupils of Ralston public school, Pittsburg, are picnicking at Rock Springs park today. The first section arrived at about 11 o'clock. It consisted of 13 coaches. The second section, consisting of 14 coaches, arrived in the afternoon. About 2,500 excursionists are here.

Tomorrow the first ward school of Pittsburg will be at the park.

TROUBLE AVERTED

Dispute Between Finley Bros. and Street Committee Settled.

The difference between Finley Bros. and the street committee of council terminated without legal trouble. Solicitor O. S. Marshall instructed the street committee to fill the street up to a level with the lot at this point in order to keep the water from forming a pond there. Finley Bros. could not be prevented from filling their lot up if they so desired, according to the opinion of the solicitor.

NOW IN JAIL

Under Indictment for Selling Intoxicants in Chester.

Allison Morrow, who was arrested by Sheriff Allison yesterday, now rests in the New Cumberland jail, an indictment for selling liquor illegally having been returned by the grand jury. He will probably be released on bail awaiting the next term of circuit court.

Appointed By the Governor.

Hon. William F. Brown, of Brownsdale, Hancock county, has been honored by an appointment from Gov. White. He has been appointed as one of the delegates from the state of West Virginia to the National Farmers' congress. It is thought the congress will be held at Buffalo.

Sued On an Account.

N. K. Huff has sued Howard Evans in Justice Johnston's court to recover $33.50 claimed due for labor performed. The case will be heard next Monday at 10 o'clock a. m.

FRIENDS AND VISITORS

John F. Adams has returned from a visit at Salineville.

Oscar Stewart, of the Southside, is seriously ill with typhoid fever.

Alfred Cartwright, of Eighth street, is off duty on account of illness.

John Bahl returned to his home in Alliance this morning after a visit with relatives.

J. W. Raper, of Lisbon road, left yesterday evening for a short visit to Benwood, W. Va.

F. O. Timmons, of East Liverpool, is visiting at the home of S. F. Timmons in Coshocton.

Mrs. Elmer Henderson left yesterday afternoon for a visit with her brother, P. Albright.

Miss Ora Baker is very ill at her home on Market street with an attack of typhoid fever. She is employed at the West End laundry.

A. G. Bentley and wife and Miss Millie Bentley, of near Randolph, N. Y., who were in attendance at the funeral of A. C. Bentley yesterday, will return to their home tomorrow morning.

W. T. Jenkins returned to his home at Kingwood, W. Va., yesterday afternoon after a visit with John McKinney.

Miss Josephine Rinehart gave a very successful recital last evening at the home of Mrs. F. M. Hawley, Wells-ville.

Miss Myrtle Hayes is again able to be at work after a two weeks' illness.

Not Quite What She Meant.

A very stout lady while out walking in a certain part of Edinburg came to a gateway which appeared to be the entrance to a private road. Not being certain, however, she asked one of two messenger boys who were standing at the entrance whether she could get through the gateway or not.

The boy looked her up and down and across. Then, winking to his friend, he replied:

"I dinna ken, missus, but think ye might try, as I saw a horse and cart gang through a wee while since."—London Tit-Bits.

appeared on the scene and took Smith in charge. The prisoner was turned over to Officers Dawson and Aufderheide and taken to jail. The policemen were not then aware that Smith had attempted to cut Oleson, and he was given his liberty by putting up $10 security for his appearance before the mayor. He took his departure and when the officers learned of the man's crime he was not to be found.

J. C. Morgan, another colored man from Pittsburg, was arrested by Officers Dawson and Aufderheide for fighting in Hancock's saloon on Second street. He was locked up and this morning received a fine of $5 and costs. Morgan had no money, but claimed to be in the employ of a Pittsburg attorney, who, he said, would pay his fine. Mayor Davidson telephoned to the address furnished him by Morgan and received the assurance that the prisoner's fine would be paid. Morgan was given sufficient money to buy him a ticket to Pittsburg and he left on the noon train.

A fight took place at the corner of Union and Third streets soon after the noon hour, in which two colored women participated. One received an ugly wound over one of her eyes and had her clothing covered with blood.

Two women on the Southside got into a similar mixup in the morning and pommelled each other until friends separated them. Both received some bad cuts and bruises.

One negro was reported to have received 30 cuts from a razor in a fight in Chester.

A report was circulated just before the excursion train left that a colored man had received fatal injuries as the result of a fight which took place near the corner of Broadway and Cook street. This was an error, although a fight did take place there in which one darkey got knocked down in a pair of steps and badly hurt.

There were perhaps a score or more of minor "scraps." Scores of women became reeling drunk and many of them had to be almost carried from the saloons in which they had been drinking.

BANK FAILURE IN GERMANY

Had Some Effect on the Stock Market Tuesday—Influence of Some Other Features.

New York, June 26.—Prices of stocks reacted sharply Tuesday and were carried down under such active selling as has not been seen in the market for several weeks past. This development did not make itself felt until late in the day, and after such a period of neglect and apathy on the part of speculative and investment interests as in itself invites to attack on prices by professional bears. There was a continual slight dribble of stocks on the market, under which prices slowly but pretty steadily yielded, except for a few special cases where desultory speculation for the rise centered, or where buying was induced by causes individual to stocks. These were entirely without influence on the general list. A rather general tendency to recover from some opening declines had the edge taken off it by the first bulletin announcement of the suspension of an important bank in Leipzig. The course of German bank shares for the last few days has indicated an unsettled condition of affairs in Germany, and Tuesday's occurrence arouses apprehension that the coming semi-annual settlements in Berlin may be the occasion of a more or less extended collapse.

With the gain in cash this week and the receipt next week of the New York gold shipments, the banks' cash reserves will be lifted to near $250,000,000. The banks' outstanding note issues are also nearly $100,000,000 below the legal maximum exempt from taxation. So that the German money market is unusually well equipped to meet a crisis. The consideration of these conditions made the speculative mind sensitive, and late in the day, when many rumors began to circulate of local banking troubles, there was a lively spilling out of stocks all through the list. The bears made the most of their unexpected opportunity and offered prices down boldly while the rumors were at the high tide of exaggeration. They succeeded in breaking through the defenses which had been established by the bull leaders while they were away for their vacations and stop loss orders were uncovered. Stocks with any large speculative accounts in them were naturally most affected. St. Paul and Missouri Pacific were conspicuous in the decline, as were a number of less prominent stocks which were marked up in the early dealings Tuesday. The drop in St. Paul extended to five points. When the nature of the investigation being made by the clearing house association of the affairs between one of the banks and the association become more accurately known and it was announced that no action would be necessary there was a lively scramble on the part of professional shorts to cover, and the rally in the principal active stocks was between one and two points. St. Paul recovered 2½, Missouri Pacific 2½ and Manhattan 2½. But the closing was not free from feverishness and was rather irregular. The money market was not disturbed, the somewhat easier tone of Monday being maintained. The earlier gains in the market were from causes peculiar to the stocks affected, such as has been the move of these movements for several days past.

The bond market was affected by the late selling, but in a much less degree than stocks. Total sales, par value, $2,770,000.

THE PLAGUE IN HONOLULU.

Four Cases Reported—Corbin May Not Land There, but Go on to Manila.

Washington, June 26.—In view of a dispatch received at the war department from General Shafter, at San Francisco, reporting four deaths from the bubonic plague at Honolulu, between May 29 and June 9, Assistant Secretary Sanger has telegraphed General Shafter to confer with General Corbin, and, if it is deemed desirable, to coal the Hancock so as to sail direct through to Manila. It was the intention of General Corbin, who is to sail for Manila on the Hancock, to stop at Honolulu and make an examination of Camp McKinley at that point, but the bubonic plague report may change his plans.

According to General Shafter's message, the president of the Honolulu board of health believes he has the plague situation well in hand.

SCORED THE RIPPER BILL.

President Scott Spoke to Pennsylvania Bar Association.

Bedford, Pa., June 26.—The seventh annual meeting of the Pennsylvania Bar association was held in the ballroom of the Bedford Springs hotel, about 300 members being present. The meeting was called to order at 10 a. m. A minute of respect and appreciation was then adopted.

The annual address was made last evening by H. M. Rose, of Arkansas.

BROUGHT 2,500 VISITORS FROM PITTSBURG TODAY.

The Big Crowd Is Enjoying Itself at the Rock Springs Resort.

The pupils of Ralston public school, Pittsburgh, are picnicking at Rock Springs park today. The first section arrived at about 11 o'clock. It consisted of 18 coaches. The second section, consisting of 14 coaches, arrived in the afternoon. About 2,500 excursionists are here.

Tomorrow the First ward school of Pittsburgh will be at the park.

TROUBLE AVERTED

Dispute Between Finley Bros. and Street Committee Settled.

The difference between Finley Bros. and the street committee of council terminated without legal trouble. Solicitor O. S. Marshall instructed the street committee to fill the street up to a level with the lot at this point in order to keep the water from forming a pond there. Finley Bros. could not be prevented from filling their lot up if they so desired, according to the opinion of the solicitor.

Under Indictment for Selling Intoxicants in Chester.

Allison Morrow, who was arrested by Sheriff Allison yesterday, now rests in the New Cumberland jail, an indictment for selling liquor illegally having been returned by the grand jury. He will probably be released on bail awaiting the next term of circuit court.

Appointed By the Governor.

Hon. William F. Brown, of Brownsdale, Hancock county, has been honored by an appointment from Gov. White. He has been appointed as one of the delegates from the state of West Virginia to the National Farmers' congress. It is thought the congress will be held at Buffalo.

Sued On an Account.

N. K. Huff has sued Howard Evans in Justice Johnston's court to recover $33.50 claimed due for labor performed. The case will be heard next Monday at 10 o'clock a. m.

FRIENDS AND VISITORS

John F. Adams has returned from a visit at Salineville.

Oscar Stewart, of the Southside, is seriously ill with typhoid fever.

Alfred Cartwright, of Eighth street, is off duty on account of illness.

John Bahl returned to his home in Alliance this morning after a visit with relatives.

J. W. Raper, of Lisbon road, left yesterday evening for a short visit to Benwood, W. Va.

F. O. Timmons, of East Liverpool, is visiting at the home of S. F. Timmons in Coshocton.

Mrs. Elmer Henderson left yesterday afternoon for a visit with her brother, P. Albright.

Miss Ora Baker is very ill at her home on Market street with an attack of typhoid fever.

A. G. Bentley and wife and Miss Millie Bentley, of near Randolph, N. Y., who were in attendance at the funeral of A. C. Bentley yesterday, will return to their home tomorrow morning.

W. T. Jenkins returned to his home at Kingwood, W. Va., yesterday afternoon after a visit with John McKinney.

Miss Josephine Rinehart gave a very successful recital last evening at the home of Mrs. F. M. Hawley, Wells-ville.

Miss Myrtle Hayes is again able to be at work after a two weeks' illness.

Not Quite What She Meant.

A very stout lady while out walking in a certain part of Edinburg came to a gateway which appeared to be the entrance to a private road. Not being certain, however, she asked one of two messenger boys who were standing at the entrance whether she could get through the gateway or not.

The boy looked her up and down and across. Then, winking to his friend, he replied:

"I dinna ken, missus, but think ye might try, as I saw a horse and cart gang through a wee while since."—London Tit-Bits.

appeared on the scene and took Smith in charge. The prisoner was turned over to Officers Dawson and Aufderheide and taken to jail. The policemen were not then aware that Smith had attempted to cut Oleson, and he was given his liberty by putting up $10 security for his appearance before the mayor. He took his departure and when the officers learned of the man's crime he was not to be found.

J. C. Morgan, another colored man from Pittsburgh, was arrested by Officers Dawson and Aufderheide for fighting in Hancock's saloon on Second street. He was locked up and this morning received a fine of $5 and costs. Morgan had no money, but claimed to be in the employ of a Pittsburgh attorney, who, he said, would pay his fine. Mayor Davidson telephoned to the address furnished him by Morgan and received the assurance that the prisoner's fine would be paid. Morgan was given sufficient money to buy him a ticket to Pittsburgh and he left on the noon train.

A fight took place at the corner of Union and Third streets soon after the noon hour, in which two colored women participated. One received an ugly wound over one of her eyes and had her clothing covered with blood.

Two women on the Southside got into a similar mixup in the morning and pommelled each other until friends separated them. Both received some bad cuts and bruises.

One negro was reported to have received 30 cuts from a razor in a fight in Chester.

A report was circulated just before the excursion train left that a colored man had received fatal injuries as the result of a fight which took place near the corner of Broadway and Cook street. This was an error, although a fight did take place there in which one darkey got knocked down a pair of steps and badly hurt.

There were perhaps a score or more of minor "scraps." Scores of women became reeling drunk and many of them had to be almost carried from the saloons in which they had been drinking.

BANK FAILURE IN GERMANY

Had Some Effect on the Stock Market Tuesday—Influence of Some Other Features.

New York, June 26.—Prices of stocks reacted sharply Tuesday and were carried down under such active selling as has not been seen in the market for several weeks past. This development did not make itself felt until late in the day, and after such a period of neglect and apathy on the part of speculative and investment interests as in itself invites to attack on prices by professional bears. There was a continual slight dribble of stocks on the market, under which prices slowly but pretty steadily yielded, except for a few special cases where desultory speculation for the rise centered, or where buying was induced by causes individual to stocks. These were entirely without influence on the general list. A rather general tendency to recover from some opening declines had the edge taken off it by the first bulletin announcement of the suspension of an important bank in Leipzig. The course of German bank shares for the last few days has indicated an unsettled condition of affairs in Germany, and Tuesday's occurrence arouses apprehension that the coming semi-annual settlements in Berlin may be the occasion of a more or less extended collapse.

With the gain in cash this week and the receipt next week of the New York gold shipments, the banks' cash reserves will be lifted to near $250,000,000. The banks' outstanding note issues are also nearly $100,000,000 below the legal maximum exempt from taxation. So that the German money market is unusually well equipped to meet a crisis. The consideration of these conditions made the speculative mind sensitive, and late in the day, when many rumors began to circulate of local banking troubles, there was a lively spilling out of stocks all through the list. The bears made the most of their unexpected opportunity and offered prices down boldly while the rumors were at the high tide of exaggeration. They succeeded in breaking through the defenses which had been established by the bull leaders while they were away for their vacations and stop loss orders were uncovered. Stocks with any large speculative accounts in them were naturally most affected. St. Paul and Missouri Pacific were conspicuous in the decline, as were a number of less prominent stocks which were marked up in the early dealings Tuesday.

The drop in St. Paul extended to five points. When the nature of the investigation being made by the clearing house association of the affairs between one of the banks and the association become more accurately known and it was announced that no action would be necessary there was a lively scramble on the part of professional shorts to cover, and the rally in the principal active stocks was between one and two points. St. Paul recovered 2½, Missouri Pacific 2¼ and Manhattan 2½. But the closing was not free from feverishness and was rather irregular. The money market was not disturbed, the somewhat easier tone of Monday being maintained. The earlier gains in the market were from causes peculiar to the stocks affected, such as has been the move of these movements for several days past.

The bond market was affected by the late selling, but in a much less degree than stocks. Total sales, par value, $2,770,000.

THE PLAGUE IN HONOLULU.

Four Cases Reported—Corbin May Not Land There, but Go on to Manila.

Washington, June 26.—In view of a dispatch received at the war department from General Shafter, at San Francisco, reporting four deaths from the bubonic plague at Honolulu, between May 29 and June 9, Assistant Secretary Sanger has telegraphed General Shafter to confer with General Corbin, and, if it is deemed desirable, to coal the Hancock so as to sail direct through to Manila. It was the intention of General Corbin, who is to sail for Manila on the Hancock, to stop at Honolulu and make an examination of Camp McKinley at that point, but the bubonic plague report may change his plans.

According to General Shafter's message, the president of the Honolulu board of health believes he has the plague situation well in hand.

SCORED THE RIPPER BILL.

President Scott Spoke to Pennsylvania Bar Association.

Bedford, Pa., June 26.—The seventh annual meeting of the Pennsylvania Bar association was held in the ballroom of the Bedford Springs hotel, about 300 members being present. The meeting was called to order at 10 a. m. The president of the association, William Scott, of Pittsburgh, made an address, during the course of which he scored the "ripper" bill, declaring that the existence of such an unlimited power in the legislature in regard to municipalities is liable to gross abuse, and suggesting some limitation by constitutional amendment.

Special committee reports were made by E. Z. Smith and Thomas Patterson, of Pittsburgh. A minute was presented to the association on the death of Edward P. Allison, of Philadelphia, the first secretary of the association, to whom Judge Simonton, of Dauphin county, Samuel Dickson and William Penn Lloyd paid tributes. Ex-Attorney General W. U. Hensel, of Lancaster, presented the portrait of Mr. Allison to the association, given by Mr. Allison's wife and family, which President Scott received. A minute of respect and appreciation was then adopted.

The annual address was made last evening by H. M. Rose, of Arkansas.

NOT LIKE OTHER MEN

By Frederic Van Rensselaer Dey,
Author of "The Brotherhood of Silence," "The Quality of a Sin," Etc.

Copyright, 1901, by Frederic Van Rensselaer Dey.

"Well done, sonny!" shouted the stranger. "Mighty well done for a youngster like you. What outfit are you with?"

"Maxwell's. The bunch is two or three miles behind me, to the east."

"Dick Maxwell's, eh? Crescent and cross," naming the brand worn by Richard Maxwell's cattle. "What may your name be?"

"Lisle Maxwell."

"Good, good! So you're Dick Maxwell's kid. You're a youngster, sure enough, but you ain't as young as you look unless I'm mightily mistaken. I saw you when you first came to this region, and that's nigh on to 17 years ago. You must have been most 2 then. How old are you, anyway?"

"I am 18."

"Well, you don't look it; not by two or three years. Is the old man with the outfit?"

"Yes."

"What are you doing here? Why ain't you back with the bunch?"

"That's my business, sir. At all events, it doesn't concern you."

The stranger chuckled audibly.

"I've heard tell that you was sassy," he said, "but you ought to wait till you grow more'n you have before you try your sass on strangers. Some of 'em ain't as good natured as I am. Never here afore, was you?"

"Sever."

"Well, you've got a mighty uncommon lot to learn; don't forget that. But I'll stand sponsor for you with the boys, and that won't do you any harm. I'm Craig Thompson. Maybe you have heard of me."

Lisle looked upon his companion with added interest then, for indeed he had heard of Craig Thompson, and not much good of him had been told either. A man who is thoroughly feared is never cordially liked, and Craig Thompson was one of those.

He was a strange admixture of gentleman and rough, a college bred man who for nearly 30 years had been adapting himself to the circumstances of his surroundings and gradually had become a part of them. He was one of those men whose age it is impossible to estimate, for he appeared at once older and younger than he really was.

His alertness and energy subtracted from his years, while his gray hair and beard and weather beaten skin added to the estimate that one placed upon them. With the exception of Lisle's father, he owned more cattle than any other man on the range, and he had been in Nevada longer than any of his neighbors. But all of this had nothing to do with his reputation. That was derived from a habit of his that was known and feared by every one who knew him.

There were frequently weeks at a time when he was possessed by what was known as his sullen fits, and during those periods it was as much as a man's life was worth to speak to him and certainly to cross him. When he came out of them, he was as loquacious as he had previously been taciturn, as kindly as he had formerly been ugly, as gentle as he had been rough, as tender as he had been hard and cruel and murderous. He was a strange mixture of saint and devil, of kindness and brutality, of generosity and merciless cruelty—a paradox and that which begets more outside interest than any other human attitude, a mystery.

"Why ain't you ever been here before, sonny?" he asked presently. "Or maybe that ain't any of my business either."

"My father would not permit me to come."

"Oh, that's it, eh? And he gave in this time, did he?"

"No."

Craig Thompson chuckled again.

"Don't you see, Lisle, that you have answered further question? That's why you're ahead of the bunch. Just jumped the stockade, flew the corral, lit out, stampeded all by yourself, same's that stealer you roped in such good style, and Dick thinks you're rounded up safe and sound at home, eh? Is that the ticket?"

"That is exactly the situation, Mr. Thompson," replied Lisle slowly. "When I first saw you swinging after the steer, I was wondering whether I had better keep down the valley or turn back and meet my father. But you have answered the question for me, for now I've got to help you in with this steer."

"Humph! Look here, Lisle. Just consider that we've shook hands, will you? That makes us friends. Now, I'm going to give you some advice, and it strikes me that for a kid who has passed all his life, if it ain't only 18 years, punching cattle, roping steers, shooting stars out of the sky and occasionally plinking an Indian or a naverly-lick man—for that's what I've heard about you—you need it as much as any feller I know. In the first place, don't 'mister' any of the boys up here on this mesa, or they'll make a curiosity out of you before you're 24 hours your present senior. In the second place, when you have once started out to do a thing don't turn back on any account. Do it or drop in your tracks facing it. It's a whole lot better to be shot between the eyes than it is to be kicked behind. That ain't elegant, but it's God's truth. In the third place, tie up to Craig Thompson for anything that you can foresee at this writing, and if he happens to have one of his fits on don't you mind 'em. They ain't for everybody, and they won't be for you. Here comes two of my boys. They'll take this critter, and we can ride in more sociably."

They were soon relieved of the care of the steer, and then they rode on silently side by side for some distance.

"Why wouldn't Dick ever let you come here before?" asked Thompson presently.

"I don't know. He would never tell me," replied Lisle.

"Well, I can tell you."

"You can! Why is it?"

"I'll tell you by asking a question or two. Didn't you wing one of my cowboys, a fellow named Cummings, about a year ago when he was over at your place after a bunch of steers that had strayed away?"

"Yes."

"What did you do it for?"

"Because he was impertinent."

"Exactly. What did he say?"

"He said that I was cut out for a woman and spoiled in the making. I convinced him that I was quicker with my gun than he was, anyway."

"Correct. He ain't forgot it, and he won't very soon. He's gone back east, but he left a piece of one of his ribs out here to remember you by. However, that is why Dick don't want you to come here. See?"

"No."

"He's afraid somebody else will say the same thing; that's all."

Lisle brought his horse to a sudden stand. His face darkened and his black eyes flashed ominously.

"Do you say the same thing?" he asked quietly, but in a tone which conveyed more than did the words that were uttered.

"Lord, what a fire eater you are! No! I don't say the same thing, but it would be a compliment if I did, for women are a hanged sight better than men. But that ain't here nor there. Some of the boys will say it, or something very much like it, and if you are going to shoot every one that does you had better lose no time in selecting a good place to start your graveyard. You won't be long in filling it."

"Why should they say such a thing as that?"

"Well, there are a good many reasons. Are you going to take what I say friendly or are you going to get mad?"

"I'll not be angry."

"Good. Well, I s'pose it's because you ain't developed much. You're 18, and you look in some ways like a boy of 14. Your voice ain't changed enough to suit the taste of such people as like to arrange other people's affairs for 'em. That's one thing. It's a good voice, but it's soft and tender and kinder cooling, like a girl's. 'Twon't hurt it any if you add a pound or two to its weight."

"What else?"

"Nothing else that I can just put my finger on unless it's your whole outfit. You have spent so much of your time in the house reading and studying, playing your piano and such like that your face has got something in it that men don't wear much out here. It's called refinement, and these cusses round here think that all the refinement in the world belongs to women. I want you to understand that every reason that any of the crowd such as you will find here can have for telling you that you are like a woman is a compliment, and you ought to take it as one. Don't get mad. Smile and look pleased, for, Lisle, there ain't no better thing on the top of God's earth than a good woman."

"I don't believe that you know," said Lisle quietly, but with such deep conviction that Thompson gazed at him earnestly for a moment in silence.

"Don't!" he said presently in a voice that was perceptibly altered.

"Well, maybe I don't, but I think I do. Some day, maybe, I'll tell you the story that makes me think so. Now, tell me why you said that."

"My father has taught me ever since I can remember that women are the curse of the world, and I believe him. He is wise concerning everything else, and he would not instruct me falsely."

An audible grunt was the only reply that Craig Thompson made, and the two rode on in silence several rods.

"I would like to see a woman," remarked Lisle, permitting his train of thought to end in a spoken sentence.

"I have never seen one in my life."

"Whoa!" cried Thompson, pulling his horse up with a jerk. Then he jammed his spurs deep into the animal's sides, so that it snorted and made two or three buck jumps before it settled down again into ordinary decorum. The ranchman's face was working in the strangest fashion, but whether with an effort to suppress a laugh or an oath it is impossible to say. At last, more to himself than to the young man at his side, the Nevadan remarked:

"Any man who will give a boy that sort of fodder to chew on is a blamed scoundrel."

Lisle Maxwell heard the words. He halted his horse as suddenly as Thompson had previously checked his and by a sudden pressure of one of his knees compelled it to turn so that it stood directly across the path of the other animal. His right arm straightened out, and Thompson found himself looking into the barrel of a ".44."

"Take that back, Craig Thompson," said Lisle in a low tone, but there was an intense meaning behind the words. The ranchman had never been nearer death than at that instant, and he knew it. But he only smiled, and there was something in the altered expression of his face which Nevadians were not accustomed to see there. All the hard lines had disappeared. All the harshness was gone, and his eyes, which ordinarily gave back a steely glitter for every gaze which they encountered, softened into a translucent sparkle while he said slowly:

"I'll take it back, Lisle, every word of it, for the Lord knows that I never meant it to sound as you took it. You needn't put your gun down till I've got through talking, 'cause I've got something to say, and after that, if you want to use it on me, you can go ahead, and I won't make any kick. I like you, Lisle, and I would honor you for killing me if you did it to resent an imputation against your father. I spoke on general principles. And now you listen. You've heard lots of bad things about me, and, supposing me to be as bad as their reports, do you think it would be logical to believe every other man in the world bad because I am or every man good because your father is? 'Tain't sense, is it? If you know enough to know that we're all born of women, and I suppose you do, you know that a woman was your mother, and there's one little fact you want to tie to all your life, because if you don't there won't be anything else that is worth trying to. It's this: Your mother was a good woman if every other woman ever born into the world was bad, and so was my mother and the mother of every one of that wild set of fellows that'll soon be raising hades around here. A woman may be bad before she's a mother, and she may be bad after she's a mother, but there ain't no exceptions to the rule that every one of 'em is good when she's a mother, so, you see, Lisle, I didn't cast any reflections on your father when I said that. I only took your mother's part without thinking of him at all, and I wouldn't be of much account as a friend to you or to any man if I didn't do that. That's right, put up your gun. Now, shall we shake hands? That's the ticket. Maybe when you know me better you'll know me better."

Then, side by side, in the beginning of a friendship which was destined to continue through bitter trials for Lisle Maxwell, they rode into camp just as the van of Dick Maxwell's outfit rose over the ridge where their acquaintance began.

CHAPTER III.
HAD BEEN TAUGHT TO BE A MAN.

DURING the remainder of that day Craig Thompson impressed everybody who knew him with the idea that he was on the point of having one of his dreaded "fits," but if any one of them had studied him closely he would have known better, for the expression of his face was childlike in its gentleness. But his loquacity was gone, for he was thinking. He had volunteered and been accepted as the intermediary between son and father, and his interview with Richard Maxwell had left upon him an impression which he was endeavoring, without success, to define. Lisle had objected to intermediation, believing the direct way to be the best, but Craig convinced him that his own way was preferable and had dispatched him on a supposedly important errand to a herdsman who had charge of an outlying bunch of cattle.

Richard Maxwell was a natural martinet. Clockwork was not more exact than were the rules of his life, from which he never deviated. His employees liked him, but at the same time they feared him. The slightest disobedience was regarded as a resignation from his employ, and Lisle was in this respect as subservient to him as they were. Maxwell was a handsome man too. Although his hair and perfectly trained mustache were as white as snow, there was not a line upon his perfect face. His eyes were his most remarkable features, for there was within their depths something so somber, so threatening, so fierce and so repellent that strangers instinctively avoided them and then looked again to discover the cause. But it was undiscoverable. The more one looked the more obscure seemed the reason for avoidance, for the surface glance upon them, although searching and deep, had nothing in it of those qualities which at first repelled. His eyes were undeniably large, and they described a perfect oval. If eyes can be intensely black, his were so, and in hue the long lashes which fringed them and the rather heavy brows that shaded them were blacker still.

You would not have said that Lisle's eyes were like his father's, but you would have insisted that Richard Maxwell's eyes were like his son's, with the difference that where the glance of the elder man repelled that of the younger attracted.

that the heart of a young man could desire, and his father had been his tutor in everything. Particularly had his instruction been thorough in every branch of knowledge which properly should belong to young manhood, and Lisle could not remember when anybody save his father had waited upon his wishes—at least until he was old enough to go abroad. After that the cowboys instructed him in riding and lasso throwing. He could ride like an Apache Indian, rope the wildest steer that ever trod the ranges of Nevada, shoot from the back of his galloping horse with revolver or rifle infinitesimal articles thrown into the air by his admiring instructors; he could leap from his horse to the ground and mount again while the creature was upon a mad run and could cast his handkerchief or his hat upon the plain and then, dashing past at the topmost speed of his horse, pick it up again; he could catch and mount and successfully ride the wildest and most untamed horse that ever belonged on Crescent and Cross ranch. There was nothing along those ranges that man could do which he had not been taught to do and to do well, better even than his instructors, and as a proficient in every manly sport—in marksmanship, horsemanship and courage—he was known and admired throughout that wide circle which had its yearly rendezvous in the Smoky valley.

Richard Maxwell had lived up to the statement he made to his lawyer 17 years ago. Lisle Maxwell was a boy in every generally accepted sense of the word. He had grown up as a boy and lived as a boy. He had studied as a boy and thought as a boy, and he had no conception of what girls and women were other than that they were something to be religiously avoided. Regarding the question of sex, his father had kept him as profoundly ignorant as a babe, and the words "girl" and "woman" were to him only terms for the expression of a thought, and that thought he had been taught to regard as repugnant. Indian women—squaws—he had seen frequently, but he had not observed much difference between them and the men except that they were uglier, more brutal and dirtier. Throughout all his studies, and they were manifold and thorough, books calculated to direct his thoughts into channels which might reveal to him his real identity had been rigorously excluded, and he had no more idea who and what he really was than he possessed 17 years ago when sleeping away from his father's arm he was stolen away from his mother's loving care. That is why the masculine pronoun is used now in referring to him.

One can understand how such a man as Richard Maxwell might accomplish all this without once making a mistake. Every question asked by the growing child was answered directly, concisely and decisively and with words that bordered so nearly upon the whole truth that they left that part which was unrevealed apparently unworthy of mention. There was a code of morals on that ranch compared with which the rigid rules of a Shaker settlement would be a travesty, and the cowboy who once forgot or neglected their related his forgetfulness thereafter in the employ of another man than Richard Maxwell.

The interior of the house where Lisle had passed all these years was lavishly extravagant. Nothing was left to be desired. Abyssinia's greatest king could not have provided a happier valley for a new Rasselas, with the exception that there was no Diarbis with whom to share its joys. The entire place, inside and outside, presented the spectacle of the abode of a man who had regulated his whole life to the fulfillment of one idea and had succeeded. Seventeen years had not, in a single particular, witnessed the avoidance of one of the multitudinous cares rendered necessary for the fulfillment of a theory such as his, utterly impracticable in its conception and scientifically impossible of completion, and yet Lisle Maxwell had arrived at the age of 18 without once imagining that woman is a necessary quantity in existence and in the perpetuation of mankind.

Nature had in some ways conspired with Richard Maxwell, for she had not hastened her work of development. Neither had she retarded it, but she had done for Lisle what she rarely does for woman. Muscular development had kept pace with feminine growth, so that as yet there was nothing about the figure of Richard Maxwell's son to suggest that he was not what he appeared to be. The sun had browned his naturally olive tinted skin so that the rich, red blood beneath could only suggest its presence by imparting a deeper tinge, and his coarse, dark hair, through which glistened a faint suggestion of burnished copper, was kept half short, so that it fell in wavy and rebellious masses beneath the broad brim of his Texas sombrero. She had given his brilliant eyes a certain boldness of expression which does not belong to women, and there was a poise about his head which had nothing suggestive of the feminine about it. The loose garments in which he was costumed were certainly and yet imperceptibly different from those of his companions, due in every instance to suggestions from the father, who never forgot nor neglected anything that had to do with his purposes.

Lisle's voice was a rich contralto, rather soft for a man, to be sure, but sufficiently strong nevertheless. In a drawing room, issuing from the throat of a society belle, it would not have been out of place. There was really nothing masculine about it, yet it was heavy enough for a youth of 18. Craig Thompson described it perfectly when he said that it was "kinder cooling, like a girl's."

Craig's interview with the ranch owner had been short, and when he came away after it was over he was no better informed concerning what the outcome of Lisle's disobedience

would be than he was before it began.

The only change that had taken place in the appearance of Richard Maxwell since that night 17 years ago when he had called upon his lawyer with the baby in his arms can be summed up in the white hair and the bronzed skin which time and exposure had imparted. In all other respects he was the same. He and Thompson were known to each other. During the time that Maxwell had spent in Nevada they had often met, so that no introduction was necessary.

"How are you, Maxwell?" was Thompson's greeting when they met, and they shook hands cordially.

"Glad to see you, Thompson," was the rejoinder. "The boys are getting the stock in rather earlier than usual this year, are they not?"

"A little. There's more of it to get in. I've got three or four thousand extra. You must have as many."

"More, I think."

"I see you've brought your kid along with you this time," said Thompson, ramming home a wad of tobacco with which he was replenishing his pipe.

"Fine lad that, Maxwell."

He did not look up as he made the remark. If he had, he would not have seen the slightest alteration in the expression of his companion. But Maxwell did not immediately answer. When he did, it was to ask a question.

"He has arrived, then?" he asked quietly.

"Yes; about an hour or two ago. I met him out on the ridge while I was chasing a steer that would have given me a deuce of a run if it hadn't been for young Lisle's rope. He said he wasn't coming to the round up, but I had to have some help to get that critter in, so I persuaded him to come along. Then he volunteered to ride out to a distant bunch of mine, and that's where he is now, I reckon. I wish I had a kid like him."

"If you see him before I do, will you send him to me?" said Maxwell.

"Sure. I say, Maxwell, have you messed with anybody yet?"

"No. I shall follow my old custom and mess with my own outfit. Thank you all the same."

"Humph!" thought Thompson as he moved away from the presence of Lisle's father. "I'll bet a dozen of the best 5-year-olds in my bunch that Dick Maxwell is madder'n a hornet, only he'll be hanged if he'll show it." Then he mounted his horse and dashed away in the direction that Lisle had taken.

"Well done, sonny!" shouted the stranger. "Mighty well done for a younger like you. What outfit are you with?"

"Maxwell's. The bunch is two or three miles behind me, to the east."

"Dick Maxwell's, eh? Crescent and cross," naming the brand worn by Richard Maxwell's cattle. "What may your name be?"

"Lisle Maxwell."

"Good, good! So you're Dick Maxwell's kid. You're a younger, sure enough, but you ain't as young as you look unless I'm mightily mistaken. I saw you when you first came to this region, and that's nigh on to 17 years ago. You must have been most 2 then. How old are you, anyway?"

"I am 18."

"Well, you don't look it; not by two or three years. Is the old man with the outfit?"

"Yes."

"What are you doing here? Why ain't you back with the bunch?"

"That's my business, sir. At all events, it doesn't concern you."

The stranger chuckled audibly.

"I've heard tell that you was sassy," he said, "but you ought to wait till you grow more'n you have before you try your sass on strangers. Some of 'em ain't as good natured as I am. Never here afore, was you?"

"Never."

Lisle looked upon his companion with added interest then, for indeed he had heard of Craig Thompson, and not much good of him had been told either. A man who is thoroughly feared is never cordially liked, and Craig Thompson was one of those. He was a strange admixture of gentleman and crouch, a college bred man who for nearly 30 years had been adapting himself to the circumstances of his surroundings and gradually had become a part of them. He was one of those men whose age it is impossible to estimate, for he appeared at once older and younger than he really was. His alertness and energy, subtracted from his years, while his gray hair and beard and weather beaten skin added to the estimate that one placed upon them. With the exception of Lisle's father, he owned more cattle than any other man on the range, and he had been in Nevada longer than any of his neighbors. But all of this had nothing to do with his reputation. That was derived from a habit of his that was known and feared by every one who knew him. There were frequently weeks at a time when he was possessed by what was known as his sullen fits, and during those periods it was as much as a man's life was worth to speak to him and certainly to cross him. When he came out of them, he was as loquacious as he had previously been taciturn, as kindly as he had formerly been ugly, as gentle as he had been rough, as tender as he had been hard and cruel and murderous. He was a strange mixture of saint and devil, of kindness and brutality, of gentleness and merciless cruelty—a paradox and that which begets more outside interest than any other human attitude, a mystery.

"Why ain't you ever been here before, sonny?" he asked presently. "Or maybe that ain't any of my business either?"

"My father would not permit me to come."

"Oh, that's it, eh? And he gave in this time, did he?"

"No."

Craig Thompson chuckled again.

"Don't you see, Lisle, that you have answered further question? That's why you're ahead of the bunch. Just jumped the stockade, flew the corral, lit out, stampeded all by yourself, same's that steer you roped in such good style, and Dick thinks you're rounded up safe and sound at home, eh? Is that the ticket?"

"That is exactly the situation, Mr. Thompson," replied Lisle slowly. "When I first saw you swinging after the steer, I was wondering whether I had better keep down the valley or turn back and meet my father. But you have answered the question for me, for now I've got to help you in with this steer."

"Humph! Look here, Lisle. Just consider that we've shook hands, will you? That makes us friends. Now, I'm going to give you some advice, and it strikes me that for a kid who has passed all his life, if it ain't only 18 years, punching cattle, roping steers, shooting stars out of the sky and occasionally plinking an Indian or a naver-lick man—for that's what I've heard about you—you need it as much as any feller I know. In the first place, don't 'mister' any of the boys up here on this mesa, or they'll make a curiosity out of you before you're 24 hours your present senior. In the second place, when you have once started out to do a thing don't turn back on any account. I do it or drop in your tracks facing it. It's a whole lot better to be shot between the eyes than it is to be kicked behind. That ain't elegant, but it's God's truth. In the third place, tie up to Craig Thompson for anything that you can foresee at this writing, and if

They were soon relieved of the care of the steer, and then they rode on silently side by side for some distance.

"Why wouldn't Dick ever let you come here before?" asked Thompson presently.

"I don't know. He would never tell me," replied Lisle.

"Well, I can tell you."

"You can! Why is it?"

"I'll tell you by asking a question or two. Didn't you wing one of my cowboys, a fellow named Cummings, about a year ago when he was over at your place after a bunch of steers that had strayed away?"

"Yes."

"What did you do it for?"

"Because he was impertinent."

"Exactly. What did he say?"

"Correct. He ain't forgot it, and he won't very soon. He's gone back east, but he left a piece of one of his ribs out here to remember you by. However, that is why Dick don't want you to come here. See?"

"No."

"He's afraid somebody else will say the same thing; that's all."

Lisle brought his horse to a sudden stand. His face darkened and his black eyes flashed ominously.

"Do you say the same thing?" he asked quietly, but in a tone which conveyed much more than did the words that were uttered.

"Lord, what a fire eater you are! No! I don't say the same thing, but it would be a compliment if I did, for women are a hanged sight better than men. But that ain't here nor there. Some of the boys will say it, or something very much like it, and if you are going to shoot every one that does you had better lose no time in selecting a good place to start your graveyard. You won't be long in filling it."

"Why should they say such a thing as that?"

"I'll not be angry."

"Good. Well, I s'pose it's because you ain't developed much. You're 18, and you look in some ways like a boy of 14. Your voice ain't changed enough to suit the taste of such people as like to arrange other people's affairs for 'em. That's one thing. It's a good voice, but it's soft and tender and kinder cooling, like a girl's. 'Twon't hurt it any if you add a pound or two to its weight."

"What else?"

"Nothing else that I can just put my finger on unless it's your whole outfit. You have spent so much of your time in the house reading and studying, playing your piano and such like that your face has got something in it that men don't wear much out here. It's called refinement, and these cusses round here think that all the refinement in the world belongs to women. I want you to understand that every reason that any of the crowd such as you will find here can have for telling you that you are like a woman is a compliment, and you ought to take it as one. Don't get mad. Smile and look pleased, for, Lisle, there ain't no better thing on the top of God's earth than a good woman."

"I don't believe that you know," said Lisle quietly, but with such deep conviction that Thompson gazed at him earnestly for a moment in silence.

"Don't!" he said presently in a voice that was perceptibly altered. "Well, maybe I don't, but I think I do. Some day, maybe, I'll tell you the story that makes me think so. Now, tell me why you said that."

"My father has taught me ever since I can remember that women are the curse of the world, and I believe him. He is wise concerning everything else, and he would not instruct me falsely."

An audible grunt was the only reply that Craig Thompson made, and the two rode on in silence several rods.

"I would like to see a woman," remarked Lisle, permitting his train of thought to end in a spoken sentence.

"I have never seen one in my life."

"Whoa!" cried Thompson, pulling his horse up with a jerk. Then he jammed his spurs deep into the animal's sides, so that it snorted and made two or three buck jumps before it settled down again into ordinary decorum.

The ranchman's face was working in the strangest fashion, but whether with an effort to suppress a laugh or an oath it is impossible to say. At last, more to himself than to the young man at his side, the Nevadaian remarked:

"Any man who will give a boy that sort of fodder to chew on is a blamed scoundrel."

Lisle Maxwell heard the words. He halted his horse as suddenly as Thompson had previously checked his and by a sudden pressure of one of his knees compelled it to turn so that it stood directly across the path of the other animal. His right arm straightened out,

"Take that back, Craig Thompson," said Lisle in a low tone, but there was an intense meaning behind the words. The ranchman had never been nearer death than at that instant, and he knew it. But he only smiled, and there was something in the altered expression of his face which Nevadaian were not accustomed to see there. All the hard lines had disappeared. All the harshness was gone, and his eyes, which ordinarily gave back a steely glitter for every gaze which they encountered, softened into a translucent sparkle while he said slowly:

"I'll take it back, Lisle, every word of it, for the Lord knows that I never meant it to sound as you took it. You needn't put your gun down till I've got through talking, 'cause I've got something to say, and after that, if you want to use it on me, you can go ahead, and I won't make any kick. I like you, Lisle, and I would honor you for killing me if you did it to resent an imputation against your father. I spoke on general principles. And now you listen. You've heard lots of bad things about me, and supposing me to be as bad as their reports, do you think it would be logical to believe every other man in the world bad because I am or every man good because your father is? 'Tain't sense, is it? If you know enough to know that we're all born of women, and I suppose you do, you know that a woman was your mother, and there's one little fact you want to tie to all your life, because if you don't there won't be anything else that is worth trying to. It's this: Your mother was a good woman if every other woman ever born into the world was bad, and so was my mother and the mother of every one of that wild set of fellows that'll soon be raising hades around here. A woman may be bad before she's a mother, and she may be bad after she's a mother, but there ain't no exceptions to the rule that every one of 'em is good when she's a mother, so, you see, Lisle, I didn't cast any reflections on your father when I said that. I only took your mother's part without thinking of him at all, and I wouldn't be of much account as a friend to you or to any man if I didn't do that. That's right, put up your gun. Now, shall we shake hands? That's the ticket. Maybe when you know me better you'll know me better."

Then, side by side, in the beginning of a friendship which was destined to continue through bitter trials for Lisle Maxwell, they rode into camp just as the van of Dick Maxwell's outfit rose over the ridge where their acquaintance began.

Every question asked by the growing child was answered directly, concisely and decisively and with words that bordered so nearly upon the whole truth that they left that part which was unrevealed apparently unworthy of mention. There was a code of morals on that ranch compared with which the rigid rules of a Shaker settlement would be a travesty, and the cowboy who once forgot or neglected them related his forgetfulness thereafter in the employ of another man than Richard Maxwell.

The interior of the house where Lisle had passed all these years was lavishly extravagant. Nothing was left to be desired. Abyssinia's greatest king could not have provided a happier valley for a new Kasselas, with the exception that there was no Dinarbis with whom to share its joys. The entire place, inside and outside, presented the spectacle of the abode of a man who had regulated his whole life to the fulfillment of one idea and had succeeded. Seventeen years had not, in a single particular, witnessed the avoidance of one of the multitudinous cares rendered necessary for the fulfillment of a theory such as his, utterly impracticable in its conception and scientifically impossible of completion, and yet Lisle Maxwell had arrived at the age of 18 without once imagining that woman is a necessary quantity in existence and in the perpetuation of mankind.

Nature had in some ways conspired with Richard Maxwell, for she had not hastened her work of development. Neither had she retarded it, but she had done for Lisle what she rarely does for woman. Muscular development had kept pace with feminine growth, so that as yet there was nothing about the figure of Richard Maxwell's son to suggest that he was not what he appeared to be. The sun had browned his naturally olive tinted skin so that the rich, red blood beneath could only suggest its presence by imparting a deeper tinge, and his coarse, dark hair, through which glistened a faint suggestion of burnished copper, was kept half shorn, so that it fell in wavy and rebellious masses beneath the broad brim of his Texas sombrero. She had given his brilliant eyes a certain boldness of expression which does not belong to women, and there was a poise about his head which had nothing suggestive of the feminine about it. The loose garments in which he was costumed were certainly and yet imperceptibly different from those of his companions, due in every instance to suggestions from the father, who never forgot nor neglected anything that had to do with his purposes.

Lisle's voice was a rich contralto, rather soft for a man, to be sure, but sufficiently strong nevertheless. In a drawing room, issuing from the throat of a society belle, it would not have been out of place. There was really nothing masculine about it, yet it was heavy enough for a youth of 18. Craig Thompson described it perfectly when he said that it was "kinder cooling, like a girl's."

Craig's interview with the ranch owner had been short, and when he came away after it was over he was no better informed concerning what the outcome of Lisle's disobedience

would be than he was before it began.

The only change that had taken place in the appearance of Richard Maxwell since that night 17 years ago when he had called upon his lawyer with the baby in his arms can be summed up in the white hair and the bronzed skin which time and exposure had imparted. In all other respects he was the same. He and Thompson were known to each other. During the time that Maxwell had spent in Nevada they had often met, so that no introduction was necessary.

"How are you, Maxwell?" was Thompson's greeting when they met, and they shook hands cordially.

"Glad to see you, Thompson," was the rejoinder. "The boys are getting the stock in rather earlier than usual this year, are they not?"

"A little. There's more of it to get in. I've got three or four thousand extra. You must have as many."

"More, I think."

"I see you've brought your kid along with you this time," said Thompson, ramming home a wad of tobacco with which he was replenishing his pipe.

He did not look up as he made the remark. If he had, he would not have seen the slightest alteration in the expression of his companion. But Maxwell did not immediately answer. When he did, it was to ask a question.

"He has arrived, then?" he asked quietly.

"Yes; about an hour or two ago. I met him out on the ridge while I was chasing a steer that would have given me a deuce of a run if it hadn't been for young Lisle's rope. He said he wasn't coming to the round up, but I had to have some help to get that critter in, so I persuaded him to come along. Then he volunteered to ride out to a distant bunch of mine, and that's where he is now, I reckon. I wish I had a kid like him."

"If you see him before I do, will you send him to me?" said Maxwell.

"Sure. I say, Maxwell, have you messed with anybody yet?"

"No. I shall follow my old custom and mess with my own outfit. Thank you all the same."

"Humph!" thought Thompson as he moved away from the presence of Lisle's father. "I'll bet a dozen of the best 5-year-olds in my bunch that Dick Maxwell is madder'n a hornet, only he'll be hanged if he'll show it." Then he mounted his horse and dashed away in the direction that Lisle had taken.

"Well done, sonny!" shouted the stranger. "Mighty well done for a youngster like you. What outfit are you with?"

"Maxwell's. The bunch is two or three miles behind me, to the east."

"Dick Maxwell's, eh? Crescent and across," naming the brand worn by Richard Maxwell's cattle. "What may your name be?"

"Lisle Maxwell."

"Good, good! So you're Dick Maxwell's kid. You're a youngster, sure enough, but you ain't as young as you look unless I'm mighty mistaken. I saw you when you first came to this region, and that's nigh on to 17 years ago. You must have been most 2 then. How old are you, anyway?"

"I am 18."

"Well, you don't look it; not by two or three years. Is the old man with the outfit?"

"Yes."

"What are you doing here? Why ain't you back with the bunch?"

"That's my business, sir. At all events, it doesn't concern you."

The stranger chuckled audibly.

"I've heard tell that you was sassy," he said, "but you ought to wait till you grow more'n you have before you try your sass on strangers. Some of 'em ain't as good natured as I am. Never here afore, was you?"

"Never."

Lisle looked upon his companion with added interest then, for indeed he had heard of Craig Thompson, and not much good of him had been told either. A man who is thoroughly feared is never cordially liked, and Craig Thompson was one of those. He was a strange admixture of gentleman and rough, a college bred man who for nearly 30 years had been adapting himself to the circumstances of his surroundings and gradually had become a part of them. He was one of those men whose age it is impossible to estimate, for he appeared at once older and younger than he really was. His alertness and energy subtracted from his years, while his gray hair and beard and weather beaten skin added to the estimate that one placed upon them. With the exception of Lisle's father, he owned more cattle than any other man on the range, and he had been in Nevada longer than any of his neighbors. But all of this had nothing to do with his reputation. That was derived from a habit of his that was known and feared by every one who knew him. There were frequently weeks at a time when he was possessed by what was known as his sullen fits, and during those periods it was as much as a man's life was worth to speak to him and certainly to cross him. When he came out of them, he was as loquacious as he had previously been taciturn, as kindly as he had formerly been ugly, as gentle as he had been rough, as tender as he had been hard and cruel and murderous. He was a strange mixture of saint and devil, of kindness and brutality, of generosity and merciless cruelty—a paradox and that which begets more outside interest than any other human attitude, a mystery.

"Why ain't you ever been here before, sonny?" he asked presently. "Or maybe that ain't any of my business either?"

"My father would not permit me to come."

"Oh, that's it, eh? And he gave in this time, did he?"

"No."

Craig Thompson chuckled again.

"Don't you see, Lisle, that you have answered my other question? That's why you're ahead of the bunch. Just jumped the stockade, flew the corral, lit out, stampeded all by yourself, same's that steer you roped in such good style, and Dick thinks you're rounded up safe and sound at home, eh? Is that the ticket?"

"That is exactly the situation, Mr. Thompson," replied Lisle slowly. "When I first saw you swinging after the steer, I was wondering whether I had better keep down the valley or turn back and meet my father. But you have answered the question for me, for now I've got to help you in with this steer."

"Humph! Look here, Lisle. Just consider that we've shook hands, will you? That makes us friends. Now, I'm going to give you some advice, and it strikes me that for a kid who has passed all his life, if it ain't only 18 years, punching cattle, roping steers, shooting stars out of the sky and occasionally plinking an Indian or a maverick man—for that's what I've heard about you—you need it as much as any feller I know. In the first place, don't 'mister' any of the boys up here on this mesa, or they'll make a curiosity out of you before you're 24 hours your present senior. In the second place, when you have once started out to do a thing don't turn back on any account. If a doctor drop in your tracks facing it, it's a whole lot better to be shot between the eyes than it is to be kicked behind. That ain't elegant, but it's God's truth. In the third place, be up to Craig Thompson for anything that you can foresee at this writing, and if

They were soon relieved of the care of the steer, and then they rode on silently side by side for some distance.

"Why wouldn't Dick ever let you come here before?" asked Thompson presently.

"I don't know. He would never tell me," replied Lisle.

"Well, I can tell you."

"You can! Why is it?"

"I'll tell you by asking a question or two. Didn't you wing one of my cowboys, a fellow named Cummings, about a year ago when he was over at your place after a bunch of steers that had strayed away?"

"Yes."

"What did you do it for?"

"Because he was impertinent."

"Exactly. What did he say?"

"Correct. He ain't forgot it, and he won't very soon. He's gone back east, but he left a piece of one of his ribs out here to remember you by. However, that is why Dick don't want you to come here. See?"

"No."

"He's afraid somebody else will say the same thing; that's all."

Lisle brought his horse to a sudden stand. His face darkened and his black eyes flashed ominously.

"Do you say the same thing?" he asked quietly, but in a tone which conveyed much more than did the words that were uttered.

"Lord, what a fire eater you are! No! I don't say the same thing, but it would be a compliment if I did, for women are a hanged sight better than men. But that ain't here nor there. Some of the boys will say it, or something very much like it, and if you are going to shoot every one that does you had better lose no time in selecting a good place to start your graveyard. You won't be long in filling it."

"Why should they say such a thing as that?"

"I'll not be angry."

"Good. Well, I s'pose it's because you ain't developed much. You're 18, and you look in some ways like a boy of 14. Your voice ain't changed enough to suit the taste of such people as like to arrange other people's affairs for 'em. That's one thing. It's a good voice, but it's soft and tender and kinder cooling, like a girl's. 'Twon't hurt it any if you add a pound or two to its weight."

"What else?"

"Nothing else that I can just put my finger on unless it's your whole outfit. You have spent so much of your time in the house reading and studying, playing your piano and such like that your face has got something in it that men don't wear much out here. It's called refinement, and these cusses round here think that all the refinement in the world belongs to women. I want you to understand that every reason that any of the crowd such as you will find here can have for telling you that you are like a woman is a compliment, and you ought to take it as one. Don't get mad. Smile and look pleased, for, Lisle, there ain't no better thing on the top of God's earth than a good woman."

"I don't believe that you know," said Lisle quietly, but with such deep conviction that Thompson gazed at him earnestly for a moment in silence.

"Don't 17?" he said presently in a voice that was perceptibly altered. "Well, maybe I don't, but I think I do. Some day, maybe, I'll tell you the story that makes me think so. Now, tell me why you said that."

"My father has taught me ever since I can remember that women are the curse of the world, and I believe him. He is wise concerning everything else, and he would not instruct me falsely."

An audible grunt was the only reply that Craig Thompson made, and the two rode on in silence several rods.

"I would like to see a woman," remarked Lisle, permitting his train of thought to end in a spoken sentence. "I have never seen one in my life."

"Whoa!" cried Thompson, pulling his horse up with a jerk. Then he jammed his spurs deep into the animal's sides, so that it snorted and made two or three buck jumps before it settled down again into ordinary decorum. The ranchman's face was working in the strangest fashion, but whether with an effort to suppress a laugh or an oath it is impossible to say. At last, more to himself than to the young man at his side, the Nevadan remarked:

"Any man who will give a boy that sort of fodder to chew on is a blamed scoundrel."

Lisle Maxwell heard the words. He halted his horse as suddenly as Thompson had previously checked his and by a sudden pressure of one of his knees compelled it to turn so that it stood directly across the path of the other animal. His right arm straightened out,

"Take that back, Craig Thompson," said Lisle in a low tone, but there was an intense meaning behind the words. The ranchman had never been nearer death than at that instant, and he knew it. But he only smiled, and there was something in the altered expression of his face which Nevadians were not accustomed to see there. All the hard lines had disappeared. All the harshness was gone, and his eyes, which ordinarily gave back a steely glitter for every gaze which they encountered, softened into a translucent sparkle while he said slowly:

"I'll take it back, Lisle, every word of it, for the Lord knows that I never meant it to sound as you took it. You needn't put your gun down till I've got through talking, 'cause I've got something to say, and after that, if you want to use it on me, you can go ahead, and I won't make any kick. I like you, Lisle, and I would honor you for killing me if you did it to resent an imputation against your father. I spoke on general principles. And now you listen. You've heard lots of bad things about me, and supposing me to be as bad as them reports, do you think it would be logical to believe every other man in the world bad because I am or every man good because your father is? 'Tain't sense, is it? If you know enough to know that we're all born of women, and I suppose you do, you know that a woman was your mother, and there's one little fact you want to tie to all your life, because if you don't there won't be anything else that is worth trying to. It's this: Your mother was a good woman if every other woman ever born into the world was bad, and so was my mother and the mother of every one of that wild set of fellows that'll soon be raising hades around here. A woman may be bad before she's a mother, and she may be bad after she's a mother, but there ain't no exceptions to the rule that every one of 'em is good when she's a mother, so, you see, Lisle, I didn't cast any reflections on your father when I said that. I only took your mother's part without thinking of him at all, and I wouldn't be of much account as a friend to you or to any man if I didn't do that. That's right, put up your gun. Now, shall we shake hands? That's the ticket. Maybe when you know me better you'll know me better."

Then, side by side, in the beginning of a friendship which was destined to continue through bitter trials for Lisle Maxwell, they rode into camp just as the van of Dick Maxwell's outfit rose over the ridge where their acquaintance began.

CHAPTER III. HAD BEEN TAUGHT TO BE A MAN.

DURING the remainder of that day Craig Thompson impressed everybody who knew him with the idea that he was on the point of having one of his dreaded "fits," but if any one of them had studied him closely he would have known better, for the expression of his face was childlike in its gentleness. But his loquacity was gone, for he was thinking. He had volunteered and been accepted as the intermediary between son and father, and his interview with Richard Maxwell had left upon him an impression which he was endeavoring, without success, to define. Lisle had objected to intermediation, believing the direct way to be the best, but Craig convinced him that his own way was preferable and had dispatched him on a supposedly important errand to a herdsman who had charge of an outlying bunch of cattle.

Richard Maxwell was a natural martinet. Clockwork was not more exact than were the rules of his life, from which he never deviated. His employees liked him, but at the same time they feared him. The slightest disobedience was regarded as a resignation from his employ, and Lisle was in this respect as subservient to him as they were. Maxwell was a handsome man too. Although his hair and perfectly trained mustache were as white as snow, there was not a line upon his perfect face. His eyes were his most remarkable features, for there was within their depths something so somber, so threatening, so fierce and so repellent that strangers instinctively avoided them and then looked again to discover the cause. But it was undiscoversable. The more one looked the more obscure seemed the reason for avoidance, for the surface glance upon them, although searching and deep, had nothing in it of those qualities which at first repelled. His eyes were undeniably large, and they described a perfect oval. If eyes can be intensely black, his were so, and in hue the long lashes which fringed them and the rather heavy brows that shaded them were blacker still.

You would not have said that Lisle's eyes were like his father's, but you would have insisted that Richard Maxwell's eyes were like his son's, with the difference that where the glance of the elder man repelled that of the younger attracted.

that the heart of a young man could desire, and his father had been his tutor in everything. Particularly had his instruction been thorough in every branch of knowledge which properly should belong to young manhood, and Lisle could not remember when anybody save his father had waited upon his wishes—at least until he was old enough to go abroad. After that the cowboy instructed him in riding and lasso throwing. He could ride like an Apache Indian, rope the wildest steer that ever trod the ranges of Nevada, shoot from the back of his galloping horse with revolver or rifle infinitesimal articles thrown into the air by his admiring instructors; he could leap from his horse to the ground and mount again while the creature was upon a mad run and could cast his handkerchief or his hat upon the plain and then, dashing past at the topmost speed of his horse, pick it up again; he could catch and mount and successfully ride the wildest and most untamed horse that ever belonged on Crescent and Cross ranch. There was nothing along those ranges that man could do which he had not been taught to do and to do well, better even than his instructors, and as a proficient in every manly sport—in marksmanship, horsemanship and courage—he was known and admired throughout that wide circle which had his yearly rendezvous in the Smoky valley.

Richard Maxwell had lived up to the statement he made to his lawyer 17 years ago. Lisle Maxwell was a boy in every generally accepted sense of the word. He had grown up as a boy and lived as a boy. He had studied as a boy and thought as a boy, and he had no conception of what girls and women were other than that they were something to be religiously avoided. Regarding the question of sex, his father had kept him as profoundly ignorant as a babe, and the words "girl" and "woman" were to him only terms for the expression of a thought, and that thought he had been taught to regard as repugnant. Indian women—squaws—he had seen frequently, but he had not observed much difference between them and the men except that they were uglier, more brutal and dirtier. Throughout all his studies, and they were manifold and thorough, books calculated to direct his thoughts into channels which might reveal to him his real identity had been rigorously excluded, and he had no more idea who and what he really was than he possessed 17 years ago when sleeping upon his father's arm he was stolen away from his mother's loving care. That is why the masculine pronoun is used now in referring to him.

One can understand how such a man as Richard Maxwell might accomplish all this without once making a mistake. Every question asked by the growing child was answered directly, concisely and decisively and with words that bordered so nearly upon the whole truth that they left that part which was unrevealed apparently unworthy of mention. There was a code of morals on that ranch compared with which the rigid rules of a Shaker settlement would be a travesty, and the cowboy who once forgot or neglected them related his forgetfulness thereafter in the employ of another man than Richard Maxwell.

The interior of the house where Lisle had passed all these years was lavishly extravagant. Nothing was left to be desired. Abyssinia's greatest king could not have provided a happier valley for a new Rasselas, with the exception that there was no Dinabris with whom to share its joys. The entire place, inside and outside, presented the spectacle of the abode of a man who had regulated his whole life to the fulfillment of one idea and had succeeded. Seventeen years had not, in a single particular, witnessed the avoidance of one of the multitudinous cares rendered necessary for the fulfillment of a theory such as his, utterly impracticable in its conception and scientifically impossible of completion, and yet Lisle Maxwell had arrived at the age of 18 without once imagining that woman is a necessary quantity in existence and in the perpetuation of mankind.

Muscular development had kept pace with feminine growth, so that as yet there was nothing about the figure of Richard Maxwell's son to suggest that he was not what he appeared to be. The sun had browned his naturally olive tinted skin so that the rich, red blood beneath could only suggest its presence by imparting a deeper tinge, and his coarse, dark hair, through which glistered a faint suggestion of burnished copper, was kept half shorn, so that it fell in wavy and rebellious masses beneath the broad brim of his Texas sombrero. She had given his brilliant eyes a certain boldness of expression which does not belong to women, and there was a poise about his head which

He did not look up as he made the remark. If he had, he would not have seen the slightest alteration in the expression of his companion. But Maxwell did not immediately answer. When he did, it was to ask a question. "He has arrived, then?" he asked quietly.

"Yes; about an hour or two ago. I met him out on the ridge while I was chasing a steer that would have given me a deuce of a run if it hadn't been for young Lisle's rope. "Sure. I say, Maxwell, have you messed with anybody yet?"

"No. I shall follow my old custom and mess with my own outfit. Thank you all the same."

"Humph!" thought Thompson as he moved away from the presence of Lisle's father. "I'll bet a dozen of the best 5-year-olds in my bunch that Dick Maxwell is madder'n a hornet, only he'll be hanged if he'll show it." Then he mounted his horse and dashed away in the direction that Lisle had taken.

DEATH LIST SIXTY

Estimate of the Fatalities
In Pocahontas Region Flood.

LESS THAN A $1,000,000

Estimate of the Railway Loss, and
That to Coal Mining Plants Light.
Dominant Loss Stoppage of Work.
Bodies Washed From Graves.

Bluefield, W. Va., June 26.—Actual casualties of the situation beyond here in the region overflooded Sunday largely curtails the accounts of the disaster. The death list seems confined to the limit of 60, nearly all of whom were negro miners and their families. The railroad loss is just less than $1,000,000 and that to the coal operations slight. The dominant loss is the stoppage of work at the mines when the contracts demand
daily supply. The Powhatan mine has already resumed work, but it may be about three weeks before all can be placed in their former condition.
It may never be known just how many people were drowned. Many of the families represented little more in
the way of identification than a name.
Only neighbors knew each other and systematic listing of the missing is
not attempted.

Will Burn Wreckage.

The railroad authorities will burn
the vast accumulation of wreckage to prevent it from making dams at the
bridges and also to preserve health.
The coke ovens were broken down by
the freight cars hurled against them.

About 150 houses in Keystone were
washed away, all the company houses
at Elkfork, and a number were washed away at Shawnee and Burke. Robert M. Garrett, a Keystone druggist,
as chairman, has organized a relief
committee, and is raising money to give to the poor whites and negroes
whose houses were destroyed and who
lost will save clothes on their backs.
The people are poor, the crops are
the worst in years, and some misery
will undoubtedly ensue. The coal operators declare they can care for their own people, and are doing so.
This will probably be true of all operators except at Keystone, which in a way is a renegade settlement. The operators resent mildly outside help,
saying it is not needed.

Colonel Charles H. Howell, president
of the Philadelphia branch of the Red Cross society; Colonel Hut-
son, of the governor's staff, and E. L.
Boggs, private secretary to Governor
A. B. White, arrived on the scene,
only to find that the loss of life was small. There is little actual suffering among the people, their normal condition being almost as bad as at present.

Colonel Howell penetrated the flooded district to Vivian, finding no use
for the Red Cross, and last evening,
before leaving for Philadelphia, wired
the headquarters of the society that
the losses were in money and property of the railroad and coal operators, and that there was no use for

Bodies Washed From Graves.

Roanoke, June 26.—A gentleman arriving in this city Tuesday from the stricken section gives an explanation
for the report first circulated that great masses of human bodies were to be seen floating around in the water that there is a graveyard between North Fork Junction and Keystone, which towns are about a mile
apart, and at which point the storm
was very severe. This graveyard is near the bank of the river. When the flood came the graves gave up their
dead and added greatly to the number
of bodies seen.

STANDS FOR PRINCIPLES.

Mr. Bryan Says He Has No Ambitions
For Office.

Watertown, N. Y., June 26.—William J. Bryan arrived in this city
about noon Tuesday. He was met by a large crowd and given an enthusiastic reception. Tuesday afternoon
he addressed a large audience at the state armory on the subject of "Civilization." Last evening he lectured again on "The Conquering Nation."
An admission was charged to both
lectures.

Buffalo, June 26.—The following,
over the signature of Mr. William Jennings Bryan, appeared in The Times,
Mr. Norman E. Mack's paper, Tues-
day afternoon:

"I am not only not a candidate for any office, but I have no candidate in mind for any office. My interest centers in principles, and men are important only as they aid in carrying
out these principles.

"The Democratic party stands for
definite, positive principles, and unless I mistake the sentiments of the masses, the voters will insist upon
adhering to these principles, in spite of the threats of reorganizers. Those who argue from the standpoint of expediency will not have influence
with the voters, because no one can say what is expedient. We may deserve to win and yet lose, but it still remains that to deserve to win is the surest road to success."

JOSEPH COOK,

FAMOUS LECTURER, DEAD.

White Hall, N. Y., June 26.—Joseph
Cook, lecturer and author, is dead at his home in Ticonderoga. He has been in ill health for several years.
Mr. Cook is best remembered by his writings to show, in his lectures, the word of the Bible with science.

Ed. Biddle Says He's Innocent.

Pittsburg, June 26.—Edward Biddle,
who was convicted of the murder of
Thomas Kahney, wrote a letter to
Mrs. Patrick Fitzgerald, in which he asserts his innocence. She says the letter inspired her recent utterances
that she believes Biddle is not guilty
of the murder of her husband.

There never has been a time in the history of professional baseball when
the thinking men of the game were
more deeply concerned than they are
at present.

The glorious pastime has withstood
adversity and many severe trials, especially during the Brotherhood outbreak of nearly a dozen years ago. That fight, however, was simply a battle between the club owners and the players,
and, as so generally happens, the money-
eyed men of the game were better organized, and the players, the workmen
of the game, were beaten. Now the conditions are entirely different,
and the outcome is being watched with considerable interest by every one concerned.

The agreement which holds the National league club owners together will

JAMES MCGINNITY, "THE IRON MAN."

expire with the present season. This would not have meant much ten years
ago, but at present it does, for the simple reason that the veteran owners of
the various clubs are not the happy
family one would expect to find where
interests are so identical. The sentiment against Freedman of New York,
while nicely cloaked, is as positive as
ever, and no love is lost between the
other club owners and the two men
who control the Philadelphia club.

Also the feeling at Boston and Chicago is not of the brotherly or fraternal sort. The presence of the bustling American league in the field, the lukewarm loyalty of the minor leagues and
the organization of the Players' association will prove to be important factors in the readjustment of the baseball schedules for next year.

I am still of the opinion that the two major leagues will come together before the end of the present season simply as a means of self protection. If this is done, the minor leagues will
quickly fall into line, and the players'
grievances can be adjusted in short or-
der. If this is not done, the baseball
conditions next spring will be chaotic
in the extreme, and baseball stock in
large and small cities will not be worth
what it is today.

And the players themselves can do
much at this time to help bring order
out of the tangle. The leaders in the association of green diamond knights
realize that contract jumpers and players whose word is worthless are a real menace to the sport. If they can prevent wholesale jumping in case of disruption, they will do much to preserve
the integrity of the sport.

I am told that when the warring factions come together N. E. Young
will retire from the head of National league affairs and that his successor
will in all probability be Ban Johnson.
Until recently the man named as the
logical successor of Young had considerable support from the other club owners, but he appears to have lost much
of his popularity during the last month.

That Young will retire seems assured,
and the game will lose one of its most honest and faithful servants. Young
has labored earnestly for the game for
a quarter of a century, and his work
entitles him to recognition. May his successor be as earnest, intelligent and honest!

Already arrangements are being perfected for the further invasion of American teams to Cuba next winter. The only hitch at present is that the Cubans show a disposition to want the best without going through the formality of paying for it. This difference promises to be adjusted within
the next few weeks.

Thomas Simpson, the secretary of
the Brooklyn club, is the American
representative of the Cuban Baseball
association and the man who took two teams to Cuba last winter. Owing to disagreements the venture was not a success, although the promoters practically lost nothing.

The next teams to be taken to Cuba
will be made up of a sprinkling of old
stars and filled in with young and ambitious minor league players. Teams
of this sort will play good ball and yet
not make a show of the Cubans, whose
opinion of their own ability on the green diamond field is decidedly inflated.

The dark skinned natives like the game and will wager their money on
everything connected with the sport.
The favorite bet of the Cuban is that
the batsman will or will not reach first base. He does not care how he gets
there, for with him it is simply a

SAME OLD GAME.

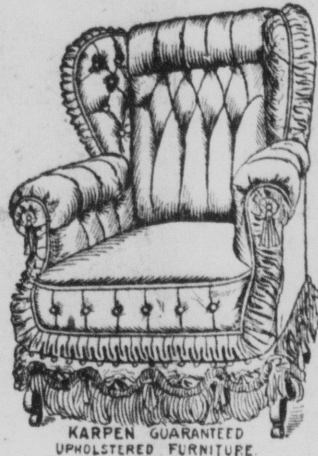

There are several concerns advertising Furniture in Magazines
using the time worn "Factory Price" scheme. They tell you they sell at absolutely factory cost, in other words, they are in the business for their health. The fact is, they do not manufacture the goods at all, they buy them same as we do and cannot sell as cheap as we do, they paying the high priced Magazine advertising they do. We will be more than pleased to furnish any catalogue or magazine advertised furniture at their price, in fact we often have the identical article on our floors always for less money.

Below are a few examples. In June McClure's, page 66, the following advertisement appears:

ASK LEWIS BROS. ABOUT IT.

case of "does or doesn't." Getting his base on balls or on an error is just as great an achievement in the eyes of the Cuban as if he had made a corking
drive good for a base or two. After reaching first base the betting is continued that he won't reach second,
and then third, and so on.

Plungers in wide rimmed hats walk
through the stands announcing their willingness to wager various sums, and
they are taken up with all of the gambling fever so prevalent in southern countries. But the Cubans don't like to be beaten too badly, and consequently the teams to be taken there should not be up to the playing strength of the National or American league organization.

Of the pitchers in the American league this year Griffith, Katol, Car-
rick and McGinnity have all done good work. McGinnity of Baltimore is showing himself to be the same "iron man"
as of old, and nobody need be surprised if at the close of the present season
he has pitched in more games than any
of the other twirlers.

McGinnity learned early how to save
his strength when delivering the ball
to the batsman, which accounts not only for his success, but for his wonderful endurance. His preliminary movements are of the sort to add speed
and control to his delivery and are not
of the back, neck, shoulder and arm
straining sort adopted by so many of the other pitchers. In thus saving his strength he has it when compelled to use it.

Heidrick, Van Haltrep, Strang and Sheppard are doing some great work
this year both in the field and at the
bat. Strang is a little chap, but has won his spurs quickly this year. Van Haltrep, his running mate, is old enough to be his father, yet the veteran
never played better ball than he is doing today. He is as spry as a kitten
and is positively fast on his feet. Heidrick of St. Louis will come pretty close
to leading the country with the bat
this year. Robinson has the find of the year in this young man in my opinion.

While on the topic of successful players it should not be forgotten that the Eastern league has developed a youngster this year for whose services there
will be a wild scramble at the close of the season. Homer Smoot of the Worcester team already has a batting
average of over .400, and if he can continue to keep up the good work with
the stick his future is assured, for the
heavy and scientific hitter is what really counts in baseball after all. Batting
is a gift; the player can learn the other departments of the game. Smoot
did not miss hitting safely in his first 25 games, quite a record for a youngster.

Woman's Horror

Modest women dread to consult a doctor about diseases peculiar to their sex. They have a horror
of private examinations and surgical operations. For this reason treatment of dangerous derangements is neglected. But the Wine of Cardui treatment, which can be adopted at home without the knowledge of any one but the patient herself, is now coming into general
use. Women who take Wine of Cardui do not have to submit to a physician's local examination nor to a surgical operation. Wine of Cardui cures in the privacy of the home. No publicity, no cutting and torture and no physician or examination, while Wine of Cardui is quietly building up and strengthening the female organs.
Menstruation is regulated, the drains of leucorrhoea
stopped and the fallen womb restored to its place. The terrible pains which rack the body are but
results of the ailments, which yield so readily
to the soothing properties of Wine of Cardui.
The medicine that cured Miss Garlen will certainly help you.

Wine of Cardui

Rockford, Tenn., Aug. 16, 1899.
I have suffered from womb trouble
for five years. Last spring a year ago I was bedfast for six months. I paid $22 to one doctor, and he said he had done all he could for me. I had
about given up, but called another doctor,
who said I would have to have surgical
treatment. I decided I might as well die a natural death as that. I happened to get a copy of the Ladies' Birthday Almanac, and found in it an advertisement for Wine of Cardui.
I could walk across my room, and in three weeks I made myself a dress. This was after my neighbors, and even my brothers and sisters, said I would never be any better. I am now in good health.

Now They Are Married.
A bashful young man went three times to ask a beautiful young lady if
he might be the partner of her joys and
sorrows and other household furniture,
but each time his heart failed him, and
he took the question away unopened.
She saw the anguish of his soul and
had compassion on him. So the next time he came she asked him if he had thought to bring a screwdriver with

him.
He blushed and wanted to know
what for.
And she, in the fullness of her heart,
said she did not know but that he
would want to screw up his courage
before he left.
He took the hint and the girl.—Pear-

JOSEPH COOK, FAMOUS LECTURER, DEAD.

White Hall, N. Y., June 26.—Joseph Cook, lecturer and author, is dead at his home in Ticonderoga. He has been in ill health for several years. Mr. Cook is best remembered by his efforts to show, in his lectures, the many of the Bible with science.

Ed. Biddle Says He's Innocent.

Pittsburg, June 26.—Edward Biddle, who was convicted of the murder of Thomas Kahney, wrote a letter to Mrs. Patrick Fitzgerald, in which he asserts his innocence. She says the letter inspired her recent utterances that she believes Biddle is not guilty of the murder of her husband.

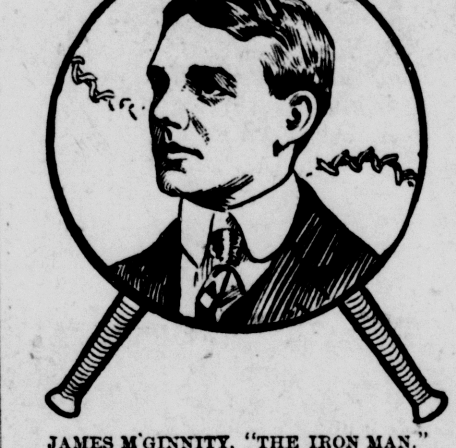

BASE BALL

There never has been a time in the history of professional baseball when the thinking men of the game were more deeply concerned than they are at present.

The glorious pastime has withstood adversity and many severe trials, especially during the Brotherhood outbreak of nearly a dozen years ago. That fight, however, was simply a battle between the club owners and the players, and, as so generally happens, the moneyed men of the game were better organized, and the players, the workmen of the game, were beaten. Now the conditions are entirely different, and the outcome is being watched with considerable interest by every one concerned.

The agreement which holds the National league club owners together will expire with the present season. This would not have meant much ten years ago, but at present it does, for the simple reason that the veteran owners of the various clubs are not the happy family one would expect to find where interests are so identical. The sentiment against Freedman of New York, while nicely cloaked, is as positive as ever, and no love is lost between the other club owners and the two men who control the Philadelphia club.

Also the feeling at Boston and Chicago is not of the brotherly or fraternal sort. The presence of the hustling American league in the field, the lukewarm loyalty of the minor leagues and the organization of the Players' association will prove to be important factors in the readjustment of the baseball schedules for next year.

I am still of the opinion that the two major leagues will come together before the end of the present season simply as a means of self protection. If this is done, the minor leagues will quickly fall into line, and the players' grievances can be adjusted in short order. If this is not done, the baseball conditions next spring will be chaotic in the extreme, and baseball stock in large and small cities will not be worth what it is today.

And the players themselves can do much at this time to help bring order out of the tangle. The leaders in the association of green diamond knights realize that contract jumpers and players whose word is worthless are a real menace to the sport. If they can prevent wholesale jumping in case of disruption, they will do much to preserve the integrity of the sport.

I am told that when the warring factions come together N. E. Young will retire from the head of National league affairs and that his successor will in all probability be Ban Johnson. Until recently the man named as the logical successor of Young had considerable support from the other club owners, but he appears to have lost much of his popularity during the last month.

That Young will retire seems assured, and the game will lose one of its most honest and faithful servants. Young has labored earnestly for the game for a quarter of a century, and his work entitles him to recognition. May his successor be as earnest, intelligent and honest!

Already arrangements are being perfected for the further invasion of American teams to Cuba next winter. The only hitch at present is that the Cubans show a disposition to want the best without going through the formality of paying for it. This difference promises to be adjusted within the next few weeks.

Thomas Simpson, the secretary of the Brooklyn club, is the American representative of the Cuban Baseball association and the man who took two teams to Cuba last winter. Owing to disagreements the venture was not a success, although the promoters practically lost nothing.

The next teams to be taken to Cuba will be made up of a sprinkling of old stars and filled in with young and ambitious minor league players. Teams of this sort will play good ball and yet not make a show of the Cubans, whose opinion of their own ability on the green diamond field is decidedly inflated.

The dark skinned natives like the game and will wager their money on everything connected with the sport. The favorite bet of the Cuban is that the batsman will or will not reach first base. He does not care how he gets there, for with him it is simply a Plungers in wide rimmed hats walk through the stands announcing their willingness to wager various sums, and they are taken up with all of the gambling fever so prevalent in southern countries. But the Cubans don't like to be beaten too badly, and consequently the teams to be taken there should not be up to the playing strength of the National or American league organization.

Of the pitchers in the American league this year Griffith, Katol, Carrick and McGinnity have all done good work. McGinnity of Baltimore is showing himself to be the same "iron man" as of old, and nobody need be surprised if at the close of the present season he has pitched in more games than any of the other twirlers.

McGinnity learned early how to save his strength when delivering the ball to the batsman, which accounts not only for his success, but for his wonderful endurance. His preliminary movements are of the sort to add speed and control to his delivery and are not of the back, neck, shoulder and arm straining sort adopted by so many of the other pitchers. In thus saving his strength he has it when compelled to use it.

Heldrick, Van Haltrep, Strang and Sheppard are doing some great work this year both in the field and at the bat. Strang is a little chap, but has won his spurs quickly this year. Van Haltrep, his running mate, is old enough to be his father, yet the veteran never played better ball than he is doing today. He is as spry as a kitten and is positively fast on his feet. Heldrick of St. Louis will come pretty close to leading the country with the bat this year. Robinson has the find of the year in this young man in my opinion.

While on the topic of successful players it should not be forgotten that the Eastern league has developed a youngster this year for whose services there will be a wild scramble at the close of the season. Homer Smoot of the Worcester team already has a batting average of over .400, and if he can continue to keep up the good work with the stick his future is assured, for the heavy and scientific hitter is what really counts in baseball after all. Batting is a gift; the player can learn the other departments of the game. Smoot did not miss hitting safely in his first 25 games, quite a record for a youngster.

Woman's Horror

Modest women dread to consult a doctor about diseases peculiar to their sex. They have a horror of private examinations and surgical operations. For this reason treatment of dangerous derangements is neglected. But the Wine of Cardui treatment, which can be adopted at home without the knowledge of any one but the patient herself, is now coming into general use. Women who take Wine of Cardui do not have to submit to a physician's local examination nor to a surgical operation. Wine of Cardui cures in the privacy of the home. No publicity, no cutting and torture and no physician or examination, while Wine of Cardui is quietly building up and strengthening the female organs. Menstruation is regulated, the drains of leucorrhoea stopped and the fallen womb restored to its place. The terrible pains which rack the body are but results of the ailments, which yield so readily to the soothing properties of Wine of Cardui. The medicine that cured Miss Garlen will certainly help you.

Rockford, Tenn., Aug. 16, 1899.

I have suffered from womb trouble for five years. Last spring a year ago I was bedfast for six months. I paid $25 to one doctor, and he said he had done all he could for me. I had about given up, but called another doctor, who said I would have to have surgical treatment. I decided I might as well die a natural death as that. I happened to get hold of a Ladies' Birthday Almanac, and decided to try your treatment. In nine days after I commenced taking Wine of Cardui and Black-Draught I could walk across my room, and in three weeks I made myself a dress. This was after my neighbors, and even my brothers and sisters, said I would never be any better. I am now in good health.

Now They Are Married.

A bashful young man went three times to ask a beautiful young lady if he might be the partner of her joys and sorrows and other household furniture, but each time his heart failed him, and he took the question away unpopulated.

She saw the anguish of his soul and had compassion on him. So the next time he came she asked him if he had thought to bring a screwdriver with him.

He blushed and wanted to know what for.

And she, in the fullness of her heart, said she did not know but that he would want to screw up his courage before he left.

He took the hint and the girl.—Pearson's Weekly.

DEATH LIST SIXTY

Estimate of the Fatalities
In Pocahontas Region Flood.

LESS THAN A $1,000,000

Estimate of the Railway Loss, and Loss to Coal Mining Plants Light.
Dominant Loss Stoppage of Work.
Bodies Washed From Graves.

Wheeler, W. Va., June 26.—Actual loss of the situation beyond here
the region overflooded Sunday curtails the accounts of the loss. The death list seems confined to the limit of 60, nearly all of them were negro miners and their families. The railroad loss is just
less than $1,000,000 and that to the operations slight. The dominant
loss is the stoppage of work at the
mines when the contracts demand
supply. The Pocahontas mine already resumed work, but it may about three weeks before all can
be placed in their former condition.
It may never be known just how many people were drowned. Many of the bodies represented little more in way of identification than a name.
Neighbors knew each other and attempted listing of the missing is attempted.

Will Burn Wreckage.

The railroad authorities will burn
the vast accumulation of wreckage to
prevent it from making dams at the edges and also to preserve health.
The coke ovens were broken down by
the freight cars hurled against them.
About 150 houses in Keystone were
washed away, all the company houses
at Elkfork, and a number were washed away at Shawnee and Burke. Robert
M. Garrett, a Keystone druggist,
as chairman, has organized a relief
committee, and is raising money to
give to the poor whites and negroes
whose houses were destroyed and who
lost will save clothes on their backs.
The people are poor, the crops are
the worst in years, and some misery
will undoubtedly ensue. The coal operators declare they can care for
their own people, and are doing so.
This will probably be true of all operators except at Keystone, which in way is a renegade settlement. The operators resent mildly outside help,
saying it is not needed.

Colonel Charles H. Howell, president of the Philadelphia branch of the Red Cross society; Colonel Hut-
son, of the governor's staff, and E. L.
Boggs, private secretary to Governor
A. B. White, arrived on the scene,
only to find that the loss of life was
small. There is little actual suffering among the people, their normal
condition being almost as bad as at
present.

Colonel Howell penetrated the flood-
ed district to Vivian, finding no use
for the Red Cross, and last evening,
before leaving for Philadelphia, wired
the headquarters of the society that
the losses were in money and property of the railroad and coal operators, and that there was no use for
the Red Cross.

Bodies Washed From Graves.

Roanoke, June 26.—A gentleman arriving in this city Tuesday from the stricken section gives as an explanation for the report first circulated
that great masses of human bodies
were to be seen floating around in the water that there is a graveyard in between North Fork Junction and Keystone, which towns are about a mile
apart, and at which point the storm
was very severe. This graveyard is near the bank of the river. When the flood came the graves gave up their
dead and added greatly to the number
of bodies seen.

STANDS FOR PRINCIPLES.

Mr. Bryan Says He Has No Ambitions
For Office.

Watertown, N. Y., June 26.—William J. Bryan arrived in this city
about noon Tuesday. He was met by
a large crowd and given an enthusiastic reception. Tuesday afternoon
he addressed a large audience at the
state armory on the subject of "Civilization." Last evening he lectured
again on "The Conquering Nation."
An admission was charged to both
lectures.

Buffalo, June 26.—The following,
over the signature of Mr. William Jennings Bryan, appeared in The Times,
Mr. Norman E. Mack's paper, Tues-
day afternoon:

"I am not only not a candidate for
any office, but I have no candidate in
mind for any office. My interest centers in principles, and men are important only as they aid in carrying
out these principles.

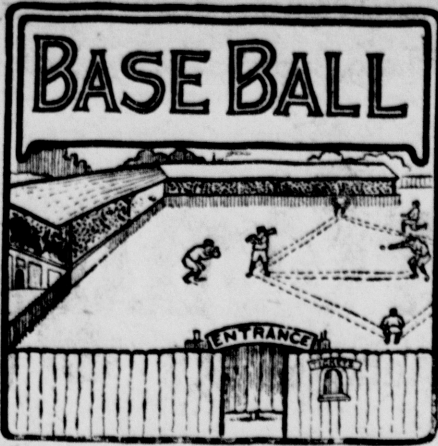

"The Democratic party stands for
definite, positive principles, and unless I mistake the sentiments of the
masses, the voters will insist upon
adhering to these principles, in spite
of the threats of reorganizers. Those
who argue from the standpoint of
expediency will not have influence
with the voters, because no one can
say what is expedient. We may de-
serve to win and yet lose, but it still
remains that to deserve to win is the
surest road to success."

one but the patient herself, is now coming into general
use. Women who take Wine of Cardui do not have to submit to a physician's local examination nor to a surgical operation. Wine of Cardui cures in the privacy
of the home. No publicity, no cutting and torture and
no physician or examination, while Wine of Cardui is
quietly building up and strengthening the female organs.
Menstruation is regulated, the drains of leucorrhoea
stopped and the fallen womb restored to its place. The terrible pains which rack the body are but
results of the ailments, which yield so readily
to the soothing properties of Wine of Cardui.
The medicine that cured Miss Garlen will certainly help you.

Wine of Cardui

Rockford, Tenn., Aug. 16, 1899.
I have suffered from womb trouble
for five years. Last spring a year
ago I was bedfast for six months. I
paid $25 to one doctor, and he said he had done all he could for me. I had
about given up, but called another doctor,
who said I would have to have surgical treatment. I decided I might as well die
a natural death as that. I happened to get hold of a Ladies' Birthday Almanac, and decided to try your treatment. In nine days after I commenced taking Wine of Cardui and Black-Draught I could walk across my room, and in three weeks I made myself a dress. This
be any better. I am now in good health.

Now They Are Married.

A bashful young man went three
times to ask a beautiful young lady if
he might be the partner of her joys and
sorrows and other household furniture,
but each time his heart failed him, and
he took the question away unopened.

She saw the anguish of his soul and
had compassion on him. So the next
time he came she asked him if he had

thought to bring a screwdriver with
him.

He blushed and wanted to know
what for.

And she, in the fullness of her heart,
said she did not know but that he
before he left.

He took the hint and the girl.—Pear-

FOR KILLBOURNE

Columbiana Democrats Instruct Delegates—The County
Ticket.

Lisbon, June 26.—(Special).—The Columbiana county Democratic convention yesterday adopted resolutions
condemning "the colonial policy of the Republican administration which had
been declared constitutional by a partisan supreme court"; declared the government was in the hands of a
money power directed by M. A. Hanna, the prince of financial magnates;
condemning also the alleged corrupt
expenditure of public money by state
and county officials.

The delegates to the state convention were instructed to support Kilbourne for governor. The following
county ticket was placed in nomination: Representative, J. C. Walsh, of East Liverpool; sheriff, S. F. Leonard, Wellsville; auditor, William Burns, Salineville; treasurer, O. S. Bryan,
Franklin township; commissioner, W.
C. Wallace, Unity township; infirmary director, Frank Gruber, Hanover township.

The following delegates to the state convention were appointed: George
B. Aten, Al Carlisle, Dr. A. W. Schil-
ler, Ed Crook, J. C. Walsh, T. F. Arnold, William Burns, John Dowler, W.
E. Raugh, W. J. Foley, W. H. Spence,
T. J. Forner.

The vote on instructing for Kil-
bourne was about 10 to 1. Al Carlisle made a strong address extolling
Kilbourne as the working man's friend.

David Black, of Salineville, was chosen county chairman.

Sense of Touch In Surgery.

There has been of late more or less
discussion on the use of antiseptic
gloves. These articles are strongly objected to, however, by experienced surgeons, who claim that the surgeon acquires a sense of touch that is of very great value to him in performing delicate and complicated operations. So acute does this become that even the extent of disease may almost be determined by it. They believe that it is possible to exercise sufficient care in the
washing of hands and the application
of antiseptics to make such gloves
wholly unnecessary. Be this as it may,
the best surgeons are very reluctant to adopt anything that interferes with the delicacy of handling, which is their chief pride and upon which to a great extent the safety of the patient depends.

KILLED NUMBER 15.

Report Received From Disastrous Wreck on Wabash Railroad.

TRESTLE WAS WASHED OUT.

Train Was Running at High Speed to Make Up Lost Time, When It
Dashed Into Washout, About Five
Miles From Logansport, Ind.

Indianapolis, June 26.—A special to
The Sentinel from Peru, Ind., about
2:30 this morning said:

Westbound passenger train No. 3,
on the Wabash railroad, ran into a washout at Cass, about 15 miles west
of here, at 12:30 o'clock this morning,
wrecking the engine and five cars.
It is reported 15 persons were killed.

The train is due at Peru at 10:55,
but left here one hour late in charge
of Conductor Brownley.

The train was running at high speed to make up lost time, and when nearing Cass a switch, five miles east
of Logansport, plunged through a trestle that had been swept away by a washout, caused by the recent heavy rains.

The engine was totally demolished
and the three passenger coaches and
two baggage cars were derailed and overturned.

Every doctor in Peru was summoned and the relief party left here
at midnight for the scene of the wreck. Details are meagre, but it is rumored that Engineer Butler, Fireman Adams and at least a dozen passengers were killed and many more injured.

FATAL STORM IN NEWARK.

Lightning Struck Slate Roof—One
Killed and Four Injured.

Newark, O., June 26.—One man
dead and four injured, thousands of dollars damage to property and many trees and much grain destroyed, is
the record of a storm which swept through a small section of North Newark.

The Edward H. Everett Glass Bottle company recently completed a fine
new factory, increasing its force to nearly 1,200 people. Their new factory was struck by lightning and the strong wind caused about 100 feet of
the slate roof to fall, spreading terror
among the workmen. Five were caught under the mass of slate and
timber, as follows:

Louis Cunningham, a laborer outside the building, was struck by a flying slate, which cut his neck and slit open his abdomen, causing death
within a few hours.

Walter Dickinson, fracture of one
leg and one arm.

Arthur Fleming, head slightly cut.

George Hasmeyer, arm sprained.

Will Douglas, left leg fractured and
back hurt.

DECLARED KILLING ACCIDENTAL

Remarkable Story of Young Man,
Who Admits Killing His Father.

Mount Clemens, Mich., June 26.—
Homer Bliss, who was arrested several days ago on suspicion of killing
his father, whose badly decomposed
body was found on his farm, confessed to the killing, maintaining,
however, that it was accidental. According to Bliss' confession he found
his father, June 3, about to commit suicide. In the struggle over the gun
he had it was accidentally discharged, Homer says, instantly killing the
father.

The next day Homer buried the
body, leaving it in the ground until June 14, when he exhumed it. Placing it on a wheelbarrow, he moved it
to the spot where it was found last Saturday. Here he propped it against
a stump and tied the gun to a sapling
to make it appear his father had committed suicide.

SOME READING STRIKERS FIRM.

President Baer's Letter Meets With Open Defiance by Many.

Reading, Pa., June 26.—Not a
dozen of the thousand striking shop
men of the Philadelphia and Reading
company returned to work, as they had been urged to do by President Baer in his letter of Saturday. On the other hand there were some ac-
cessions to the ranks of the strikers.

Held Act Unconstitutional.

Columbus, C., June 26.—The supreme court held the special act providing for the licensing of stationary
engineers in Cincinnati to be unconstitutional, and ousted the examining board appointed under the act. The effect of the decision is to extend the jurisdiction of the state board created to license engineers over the entire state.

Miss Portia Knight Engaged Clarke.

London, June 26.—Miss Portia
Knight, the American actress, has engaged Sir Edward Clarke, the former solicitor general, as counsel in the suit for breach of promise which she has brought against the Duke of Manchester.

Miss Ellen Lee Married.

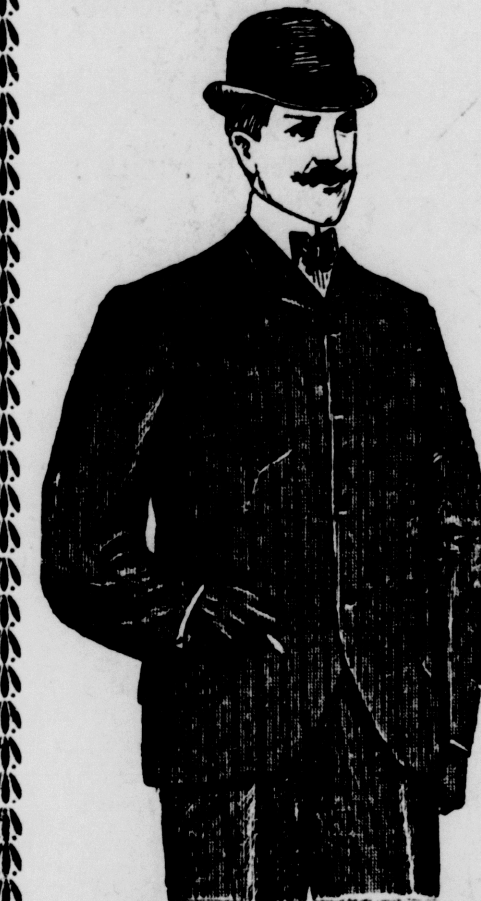

New York, June 26.—The wedding
of Miss Ellen Lee, daughter of Brigadier General Pittsburgh Lee, to First Lieutenant James Cooper Rhea, of the Seventh cavalry, U. S. A., took place
in the Church of the Transfiguration,
in this city.

Grant Increase In Wages.

Cleveland, June 26.—The Big Consolidated Street Car company, which
controls the larger portion of the electric street car service in this city,
has granted its 1,200 employees a voluntary increase in wages, amounting
to about 10 cents a day.

A Lesson to Humorists.
One cannot safely assume in these
days that there is any region in which
such and such a journal is not read.
Recently a certain humorist needed a
rest and went and stopped in a cottage
in a remote village by the sea. His sitting room opened on the kitchen,
where his landlady, a woman widely
esteemed as a person of great acumen
and a maker of phrases, was wont to receive the neighbors. He listened and put both landlady and neighbors into
some amusing sketches which were promptly published in a London magazine. A month or two went by. Then
one afternoon he came back to the cottage to meet and cover before an indignant matron, who told him, among other things, that he had one hour in which to pack his traps and quit the village. She was not going to have an eavesdropper in her house, and she
added a significant hint to the effect

that the people of the village were of
the same opinion and might be betrayed into an attempt to give a forcible demonstration of their views.—London
Post.

How She Rules Him.

"Skinphint's wife certainly has remarkable success in managing him. I wonder how she does it."
"When he undertakes to deny her anything she really wants, she threatens to sue him for divorce."
"Does he care so much for her,
then?"
"Oh, no, it's not that, but he figures
that it is cheaper to let her have her
own way than it would be to either defend the suit or pay alimony."—Chicago Post.

Columbiana Democrats Instruct Delegates—The County
Ticket.

Lisbon, June 26.—(Special.)—The Columbiana county Democratic convention yesterday adopted resolutions
condemning "the colonial policy of the Republican administration which had
been declared constitutional by a partisan supreme court"; declared the

condemning also the alleged corrupt
expenditure of public money by state
and county officials.

The delegates to the state con-

Sense of Touch In Surgery.

There has been of late more or less
discussion on the use of antiseptic
gloves. These articles are strongly objected to, however, by experienced surgeons, who claim that the surgeon ac-
quires a sense of touch that is of very
great value to him in performing delicate and complicated operations. So
acute does this become that even the
extent of disease may almost be determined by it. They believe that it is possible to exercise sufficient care in the
washing of hands and the application
of antiseptics to make such gloves
wholly unnecessary. Be this as it may,
the best surgeons are very reluctant to
adopt anything that interferes with the
delicacy of handling, which is their
chief pride and upon which to a great
extent the safety of the patient depends.

KILLED NUMBER 15.

Report Received From Disastrous Wreck on Wa-
bash Railroad.

TRESTLE WAS WASHED OUT.

Train Was Running at High Speed to
Make Up Lost Time. When It
Dashed into Washout. About Five
Miles From Logansport, Ind.

Indianapolis, June 26.—A special to
The Sentinel from Peru, Ind., about
2:30 this morning said:

Westbound passenger train No. 3,
on the Wabash railroad, ran into a
washout at Cass, about 15 miles west
of here, at 12:30 o'clock this morning,
wrecking the engine and five cars.
It is reported 15 persons were killed.

The train is due at Peru at 10:55,
but left here one hour late in charge
of Conductor Browley.

The train was running at high
speed to make up lost time, and when
nearing Cass a switch, five miles east
of Logansport, plunged through a
trestle that had been swept away by
a washout, caused by the recent heavy
rains.

The engine was totally demolished
and the three passenger coaches and
two baggage cars were derailed and
overturned.

Every doctor in Peru was sum-
moned and the relief party left here
at midnight for the scene of the wreck. Details are meagre, but it is rumored that Engineer Butler, Fire-
man Adams and at least a dozen passengers were killed and many more
injured.

FATAL STORM IN NEWARK.

Lightning Struck Slate Roof—One
Killed and Four Injured.

Newark, O., June 26.—One man
dead and four injured, thousands of dollars damage to property and many
trees and much grain destroyed, is
the record of a storm which swept
through a small section of North New-
ark.

The Edward H. Everett Glass Bottle company recently completed a fine
new factory, increasing its force to nearly 1,200 people. Their new factory was struck by lightning and the
strong wind caused about 100 feet of
the slate roof to fall, spreading terror
among the workmen. Five were caught under the mass of slate and
timber, as follows:

Louis Cunningham, a laborer out-
side the building, was struck by a
flying slate, which cut his neck and
slit open his abdomen, causing death
within a few hours.

Walter Dickinson, fracture of one
leg and one arm.

Arthur Fleming, head slightly cut.

George Hasmeyer, arm sprained.

Will Douglas, left leg fractured and
back hurt.

DECLARED KILLING ACCIDENTAL

Remarkable Story of Young Man,
Who Admits Killing His Father.

Mount Clemens, Mich., June 26.—
Homer Bliss, who was arrested several days ago on suspicion of killing
his father, whose badly decomposed
body was found on his farm, confessed to the killing, maintaining,
however, that it was accidental. According to Bliss' confession he found
his father, June 3, about to commit
suicide. In the struggle over the gun
he had it was accidentally discharged, Homer says, instantly killing the
father.

The next day Homer buried the
body, leaving it in the ground until June 14, when he exhumed it. Placing it on a wheelbarrow, he moved it
to the spot where it was found last Saturday. Here he propped it against
a stump and tied the gun to a sapling
to make it appear his father had
committed suicide.

A Lesson to Humorists.

One cannot safely assume in these
days that there is any region in which
such and such a journal is not read.
Recently a certain humorist needed a
rest and went and stopped in a cottage
in a remote village by the sea. His
sitting room opened on the kitchen,
where his landlady, a woman widely
esteemed as a person of great acumen
and a maker of phrases, was wont to receive the neighbors. He listened and
put both landlady and neighbors into
some amusing sketches which were promptly published in a London magazine. A month or two went by. Their
one afternoon he came back to the cottage to meet and cover before an indignant matron, who told him, among
other things, that he had one hour in
which to pack his traps and quit the village. She was not going to have an eavesdropper in her house, and she
added a significant hint to the effect

How She Rules Him.

"Skinphint's wife certainly has remarkable success in managing him. I
wonder how she does it."
"When he undertakes to deny her
anything she really wants, she threatens to sue him for divorce."
"Does he care so much for her,
then?"
"Oh, no, it's not that, but he figures
that it is cheaper to let her have her
own way than it would be to either
defend the suit or pay alimony."—Chicago Post.

COUNCIL HELD ANOTHER LONG AND BUSY SESSION

Contemplated Improvement of Bradshaw Avenue Will Be Carried Through.

ORDINANCE IS TO BE PUBLISHED

Providing For the Work and Operations Will Soon Be Commenced.

Providing for an Increase in the Wages of City Firemen—Considerable Other Business of Importance Considered By the Solons.

When the members of council gathered last evening at the city hall it was with the expectation that the session would not continue longer than about 15 minutes. Owing to the absence of Clerk Hanley, together with the book of minutes, it was thought that only business of a pressing nature would be looked after. However, in spite of the understanding that a short meeting would be held, the city fathers got at their old-time tricks and did not adjourn until 10 o'clock.

Messrs. Nice and Cripps were absent when Acting Clerk McLane called the roll, but Cripps arrived some time later. A report was read from the members of the appraising board appointed to establish a rate of assessment for the improvement of Calcutta road and to place a proper valuation on the properties abutting that thoroughfare. The report was accepted.

A communication was read from a number of property owners on Vine street, asking that the thoroughfare be improved. The recent rains have done considerable damage to the street and it is in many places almost impassable. The communication was referred to the street committee and engineer.

The Bradshaw avenue improvement proposition was what took up the greater amount of council's time. It was brought up by Bullock and in the debates that followed all the solons had their round. At the previous meeting of council the ordinance providing for the improvement of Bradshaw avenue was laid on the table and its publication withheld pending the adjustment of minor details regarding the work. At the conclusion of the debates last evening it was decided to proceed with the work without delay.

A proposition was submitted from the East Liverpool Land company in which the agreement was made to furnish dirt for the necessary filling of Bradshaw avenue at 15 cents per yard. Bullock asked that the proposition be accepted, but Solicitor Gaston explained that it would not be legal to do so. Bullock asked the solicitor for an opinion as to how the matter should be attended to, and Mr. Gaston stated that the proposition should be placed on file. A motion to that effect carried.

A communication from Mrs. Jennie Kail was read, in which she consented to bear her share of the expense of the improvement. This added inspiration to those of the solons who have been agitating the improvement and all wanted the floor at the same time. Marshall said he thought the price of the work was exorbitant, but explained that he did not wish it understood he was trying to hold it back.

C. L. Gray was present and addressed the council. He urged that the contemplated improvement be pushed as much as possible and pointed out the necessity of having it done. His speech was forceful and carried sufficient weight with it to induce Cripps to make a motion that the ordinance be again taken up and acted on.

The ordinance provided for the construction of a storm water sewer and grading only, and Cripps thought the paving of the street should be included also. Marshall then spoke and endorsed Cripps' suggestion. Engineer Kelly told council he considered it to be advisable to give the contract for the entire job to one man.

A motion by Marshall to that effect carried. The ordinance when put in shape will be published and the clerk and mayor be instructed to advertise for bids.

A resolution was submitted asking that the bid of Harrison Rinehart, amounting to $1,165.70, be accepted for the construction of a sanitary sewer on Chestnut street. Considerable arguing was done in which McLane and Heddleston exchanged compliments, with the result that the bid was referred to the engineer, who will make an estimate of the cost of the job.

Orr brought the ancient Lounds' bill up before council. It was finally voted that the bill be rejected.

A resolution was accepted providing for the publication of a notice of the estimated assessments of property owners on Calcutta road for the improvement of that thoroughfare.

An ordinance was introduced by Thomas and placed on first reading, which provides that the firemen's wages be increased to $2.50 per day and that they receive other equal rights as enjoyed by the members of the police force.

Solicitor Gaston stated that he had investigated the claim of Attorney McGarry for damages asked by reason of an accident which befell an East End girl who was struck a few weeks since by a street car and who claimed she was forced to walk on the railway track owing to the bad condition of the sidewalk. He thought the claim should not be passed.

Orr said that the residents along Tanyard run were inconvenienced by the absence of an inlet from Oblique street, and that during heavy rains the property in that vicinity became flooded. The matter will be looked after.

Cripps, representing the street committee, reported that the steps leading up a certain alley to Lisbon road should be improved, but regarding the contemplated bridge across Carpenter's run he said the cost had been figured at $2,000, which was too expensive to think about.

The engineer was instructed to establish a grade on Summer lane. The session was then brought to a close.

Owing to the absence of the minutes the solons were very much handicapped and much business brought up was held over until the next meeting.

Heddleston occupied the president's chair in the absence of Nice.

Barthel claims he was lying on the ground near the pavilion and while listening to the music for a few moments. When he awoke the watch was gone. The matter was reported to the police, who have since been working on the case. The arrest of the thief is thought to be near at hand.

HOPES OF SALEM ARE ELEVATED

Visions of Another Street Railway. Part of a Great System.

THE PROJECT A NEW ONE

The New Line Is to Connect the Quaker Community With Canton And Cleveland Systems—The Survey Now in Progress.

Salem, June 26.—Salem has visions of a new street railway. It is said it is to be in operation between this city and Canton by January 1. John Pottorf, one of the engineers engaged in the survey, visited his father, Seamore Pottorf, south of the city, this week, and talked of the project. He said the intention was to have a through line to Cleveland. The Standard Surveying company of Detroit is engaged in marking the route. The corps started from Canton and is now working between Louisville and Maximo. The survey for the route is already finished between Alliance and Sebring. When Alliance is reached the surveyors will then start at Sebring and come on to Salem.

This railway scheme is an entirely different one from the Alliance, Sebring and Salem railway in which J. C. Whitla, H. W. Klein and others were interested. The route of the latter company is surveyed along the state road. The new company does not intend to use the roadway except to cross it, but will cut across the fields, farms and woods and use private right of way the entire distance. The route between this city and Alliance will be as near an air line as possible.

An office of the company has been located in Alliance. The power house for the Canton and Salem electric railway will be located at Alliance. The site has already been chosen and surveyed. The people behind the mammoth project are well known Cleveland capitalists, said to be the Everett-Moore syndicate.

NEW OIL WELLS

Make the Port Homer Field Look Much More Promising Than Formerly.

Toronto, O., June 26.—The coming in of two paying wells in the Port Homer oil field within the past two weeks makes that field look better than it did, and will have a tendency to spur on further work in the way of continuing the search for the oleaginous fluid. The Miller well, which has been cleaned out, and put in good shape, is now said to be producing nearly 30 barrels. The well is on the Samuel Beebort farm. Another of the recent wells is that drilled by H. C. DeSelle near the school house, which has settled down to about a five barrel production.

Drilling will be started Monday on a well on the Squire Cooper farm.

VISITING KNIGHTS

Will Come on a Special Train to the Columbians' Meeting Tonight.

The special train conveying the visiting Knights of Columbus from Steubenville, Wheeling, Toronto and other points down the river, will arrive in the city at 7:30 tonight. The visitors will adjourn to the hall of the local council, where the third degree will be conferred upon a class of some 50 eligible candidates.

Deputy P. A. Gavin, of Toronto, will have charge of the work. They expect to start on the return trip at 11 o'clock.

TRIAL POSTPONED

Owing to the inability of Attorney Lones, of Wellsville, to be present the case of C. K. Collins against the Mark Hambleton company in Justice McLane's court, which was set for trial this afternoon, was postponed until tomorrow afternoon.

The defendant's attorney objected to the postponement and it was necessary for the plaintiff to ask for a jury trial in order to have the case held over.

Nothing has as yet been learned of the whereabouts of the alleged thief, but it is thought he went to Parkersburg.

BARTENDER'S NARROW ESCAPE

Negro Attempted to Cut His Throat, But Inflicted Only a Slight Wound. Assailant Arrested—Picnickers Caused Officers Much Trouble.

A crowd of tough colored people took advantage of the low rates offered by the excursion of the Avery Mission, Allegheny, to Rock Springs yesterday. The consequence was a great deal of fighting and disorder, both in Chester and in East Liverpool, and disgraceful scenes of drunkenness. The park officials state that there was no disorder on their grounds. It was the saloon patrons that raised the disturbances, and used their razors and revolvers freely.

A report that a colored woman who was assaulted in a melee had died on her way home could not be confirmed either at the Pittsburg coroner's office or at Pittsburg newspaper offices and is probably untrue, though the woman was badly injured. In justice to the Avery Mission people it should be stated that the disorderly element did not belong to their party, but to outsiders who came along on the excursion. East Liverpool and Rock Springs were both glad when the last of the excursionists took their departure.

Several hundred dusky men and women spent the day on this side of the river and there was drinking, carousing and fighting galore.

In Chester affairs were also very brisk. Robert Spriggs and another darkey became embroiled in a quarrel while on the street car in charge of Motorman Wynne yesterday afternoon. They left the car near St. Clair's restaurant and made at one another. Spriggs drew a revolver and fired one shot at his antagonist, who proceeded to lay Spriggs' right arm open with a razor. The cut extended almost from the shoulder to the elbow and was clean to the bone. Friends of the participants interfered and no more blood was shed. The injured man was taken to St. Clair's yard and Mrs. St. Clair telephoned for Dr. Lewis. He responded and after dressing and sewing up the wound, he found that the patient had no money. Another picnicker had ransacked the injured man's pockets.

The doctor finally succeeded in getting $1.25 from one of the colored man's friends. This was all he received for his services. George Arner hauled the man from where the fight occurred to the St. Clair yard. A roll of bills containing $35 dropped out of his pocket and Mr. Arner picked it up. Later the colored man's friend called for it and Mr. Arner returned it after being assured that they had paid the doctor, which statement was untrue.

But one colored man was arrested by the Chester authorities. He was taken before Mayor Dunn and when it was found that he had no money he was released and sent back to Pittsburg.

A colored woman was struck on the head with a ball bat by her lover. She was rendered unconscious by the blow. Her friends assisted her to Dr. Lewis' office, but he refused to permit them to enter the office, but offered to dress the wound while the woman remained on the outside. The colored people refused this and took her away. The woman was then almost naked.

In East Liverpool John Smith, of Allegheny, made an attempt to cut Walter Oleson's throat yesterday afternoon, and though he did succeed in inflicting a gash across the man's neck it was not serious. Oleson tends bar at Harry Hughes' saloon on Second street. Smith went in the barroom while under the influence of liquor and tried to start a fight with two white men. Oleson interfered and attempted to eject the negro when the razor was brought into use.

The residents of Ohio avenue and other streets fronting on the river have decided to put a stop to the swimming that is carried on in full view of their houses at all times in the day and evening. A number of boys can be seen here at almost any time in the day except when a policeman happens along, when they betake themselves to a hiding place among the bushes along the shore.

The residents, however, have learned their names, and one of them states this morning complaints will be made against them at once unless the practice is discontinued.

KNOWS AGUINALDO

Another Wheeling Man Apparently on Friendly Terms With the Ex-Rebel.

Writing from Alaminos, Zambales, P. I., May 16, F. Jay Pickard, of Co. B, Seventeenth U. S. infantry, formerly acting interpreter, disputes the claim of Earl Criswell, of Wheeling. Criswell was alleged to have said he was the only man from the Nail City that ever shook hands with Aguinaldo. Mr. Pickard says in a letter to the News Review:

"I have not only shaken hands with him, but have sat at the same table and eaten rice with him, and also with General Luna, who is now dead."

"I have been here in this country since the taking of San Fernando. The Twenty-third is not on this island, and has not been, but on the island of Negros, south of here. General Aguinaldo said, since his capture, that he had been in Northern Luzon—that is, north of Manila—since the beginning of the insurrection. I only wish to let Mr. Criswell see that he is not the only Wheeling man who did as he said. I can prove every word I say."

WELLSVILLE

ENGINEER BELIEVES IT CAN BE HAD FROM THE CREEK.

The Proposed System for Wells-ville Would Cost About $117,000.

The supplementary report upon Little Yellow creek as a source of water supply for Greater Wellsville was submitted to the board of water trustees by Consulting Engineer Chapin, of Canton, last evening, and met with much approval.

The report is a long one. It is typewritten and is illustrated with a number of photographs. It is even more favorable to Little Yellow creek as a source of supply than was the preliminary report.

The report sets forth in detail the possibilities of the creek as a source of water supply and describes where the reservoir, the dam and the clear-water reservoir should be located, and gives estimates of the expense of constructing the several parts of a gravity system of water works on the creek. The superior quality of the creek water as compared with that of the river is pointed out.

Mr. Chapin's estimates of the cost of building the gravity system on the creek are as follows: For main dam and reservoir, $25,590; clear water reservoir, $22,500; pipe lines and appurtenances, $68,275; roads and telephone lines, $1,000; engineering and inspection, $5,035; total, $122,400.

The report includes an additional item of $8,500 for a high service reservoir on Bailey's run, which the board thinks is not necessary, and that item will be cut out. The board is of the opinion that about $117,000 will build the system.

The report states that with the additional high service reservoir on Bailey's run the city would have a system that would supply the demands of a city of 20,000 people. It would furnish pure water without the expense of a filtration plant. Omitting the Bailey's run reservoir the system will supply a city of 15,000 people. The board thinks that a system that will provide for 15,000 people is sufficient for some time.

Mr. Chapin estimates the dry weather flow of water at 637,500 gallons per day. With the Bailey's run reservoir this flow could be increased to 847,500 gallons per day. The Hammond farm, about three miles up the creek, is selected as the site for the clear-water reservoir. Its capacity is to be 33,000,000 gallons. Its water surface is to be 8.5 acres and 22 acres of land will be required for its construction and protection. The maximum depth of the water will be 22 feet. The object of this reservoir is to provide a supply of clear water at all times. The water will flow from the main storage reservoir to the clear-water reservoir.

The great dam and storage reservoir is located on the Martha Campbell farm. It is to have a capacity of 55,000,000 gallons. The dam is to be an arch dam, rising 30 feet above the bed of the creek. The water surface of the reservoir will be 12.50 acres, and the maximum depth of the water will be 30 feet.

Of the water to be obtained from such a system the report says: "There is no question that it will be far superior to the best supply to be had from the river, and well adapted for both domestic and manufacturing purposes."

The report will be published and distributed. The board is to arrange to have Engineer Emil Kuichling, of Rochester, N. Y., pass upon Mr. Chapin's report, and the entire problem presented by the creek.

Mr. Lockhart states that he will get a boat just as soon as he can.

IN HIGH REPUTE

The Great Author And Physician, Dr. A. W. Chase, Is Remembered in East Liverpool.

All over the world Dr. A. W. Chase's receipt book is known, as also in many parts of this country his skill as a physician, and from the great success of his medicines the name will be handed down from generation to generation. Attempts are often made to sell other medicines over the reputation of the doctor—some go so far as to use the name "Chase," but they dare not use the initials "A. W."—portrait or signature which is borne on every box of the genuine—the kind referred to by Mrs. George Hall, of 389 West Market street, East Liverpool, O., who says: "I was bilious—my head ached hard and constantly—there was a general feeling of weakness and depression. I was asked to try Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills and did so, getting them at Larkins' drug store, corner Sixth and East Market streets. The result was very good indeed, as the biliousness was overcome—the headaches cured and bodily and nerve strength furnished. Dr. A. W. Chase's Ointment I can vouch for in burns as a fine application."

Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills are sold at 50 cents a box, also Dr. A. W. Chase's Ointment at 50 cents a box at dealers, or Dr. A. W. Chase Medicine company, Buffalo, N. Y. See that portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M. D., are on every package.

For the next ten days, commencing this day, June 26, the reservoir will be empty so that a connection can be made between the old and new reservoirs. Therefore, we request all consumers to be careful and use as little as possible.

VERY QUICK WORK

By the Columbus Convention In Naming a Republican Ticket.

A GOOD STRONG PLATFORM

Ohio Republican Convention Finished
Its Work In Short Order—Hanna Cut Short His and Others' Speeches and Rushed Business.

Columbus, O., June 26.—The Republican state convention nominated the following ticket:
Governor—George K. Nash.
Lieutenant Governor—Carl L. Nippert.
Supreme Judge—J. L. Price.
Attorney General—John M. Sheets.
Clerk of the Supreme Court—Lawson E. Emerson.
State Treasurer—Isaac B. Cameron.
Member of Board of Public Works—W. G. Johnson.

The convention reconvened Tuesday from Monday, and was in session from about 10:10 a. m. to about 1:10 p. m. The intense heat was prostrating, and Chairman Hanna not only cut short his own speech, but also those of others, and then dispatched business with speed.

Quick Work In Convention.

In about three hours the convention nominated a full state ticket, adopted its declaration of principles, endorsed Joseph F. Foraker as the Republican candidate for re-election as United States senator, completed the party organization for the campaign, and transacted other business.

Of the seven nominations only three were new men, and one of these, Nippert, for lieutenant governor, was nominated without opposition, after Lieutenant Governor Caldwell had declined renomination. Nash, Sheets, Cameron and Johnson were renominated for second terms without opposition. There were free-for-all contests for the nomination for supreme judge and clerk of the supreme court.

It had been currently reported that Crew and Critchfield were on the Hanna slate for these two nominations, but Senator Hanna vigorously denied taking any part whatever in the contests for these two places. The vote showed that Price and Emerson had formed a combination that worked successfully for both of them. Judge Price, of Lima, has been on the common pleas and circuit benches, and Emerson has been prominent in politics in Eastern Ohio for years.

The nomination that caused the most comment was that of Nippert in place of Lieutenant Governor Caldwell, the latter being the only one who was elected with Governor Nash two years ago that was not renominated for a second term. The State Anti-Saloon league caused Caldwell to run several thousand behind his ticket in 1899, and had vigorously opposed his nomination. There were frequent calls for Caldwell in the convention, but he could not be induced to take the platform. While the delegates were calling for Caldwell, Chairman Hanna made Caldwell a member of the committee to escort Governor Nash to the hall, to deliver his speech of acceptance, and while the committee was out Chairman Hanna promptly called up the next order of business and State Senator Nippert was nominated. Nippert has been principal of schools in Cincinnati and police prosecutor there.

Senator Foraker was accompanied last night to Cincinnati by a large delegation. Senator Hanna and Governor Nash went to Gambier, where they are to deliver addresses today at the commencement of Kenyon college.

What the Resolutions Contain.

The report of the resolutions committee, which was unanimously adopted by the convention as the platform of the party in Ohio, reaffirms the Philadelphia platform; pledges undivided support to the Republican party, the magnificent achievements of which, it is declared, have added lustre to American history and under the administration of which the United States has become a world power. Industry has revived, it is set forth; plenty has succeeded want, and our export trade now leads the world.

The gold standard is specifically endorsed. Further strengthening of the navy, legislation looking to the restoration of the merchant marine, the speedy construction of an American ship canal across the isthmus, are declared to be imperative needs.

In regard to combinations of capital the platform says:
"We recognize the right of both labor and capital to combine when such combinations are wisely administered for the general good, but combinations which create monopolies to control prices or limit production are an evil which must be met by effective legislation, vigorously enforced."

Congress is asked to renew the humane and reasonable laws and treaties for the continued protection of American labor. This has particular reference to the expiration of the act.

A ringing tribute is paid to the soldiers and sailors of Uncle Sam.

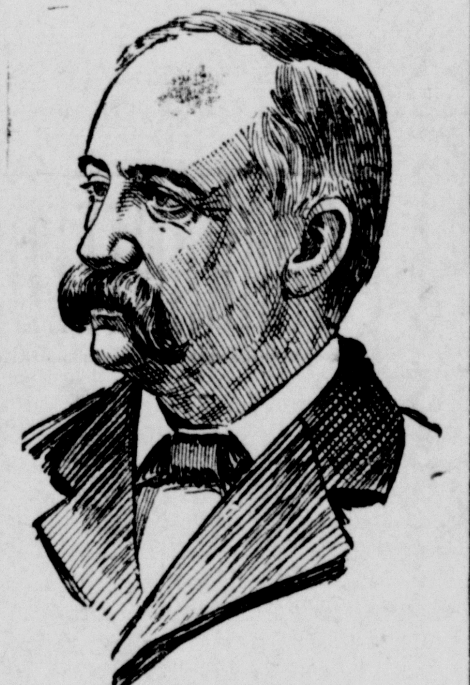

Attempts to deprive any citizen of his right to vote under the constitution is denounced, and the demand is made that representation in congress and in the electoral college shall be based on the actual voting population, proportionate reduction being made for any state in which the right of suffrage shall be denied, except for crime.

Lynching is denounced in unmeasured terms.

Victory for American arms in the war with Spain is declared to have brought the blessings of liberty to millions of human beings. The Republican principle that congress has power to govern the new possessions according to the needs of their people and in the interest of the people of the United States is declared to have been upheld by the supreme court. President McKinley is lauded for "the prudent and successful management of American interests in China." It is declared that the national pledge to Cuba is being faithfully kept, insuring freedom and independence to her people, who, it is added, are today enjoying more prosperity than ever before. The Cubans are congratulated upon "wise and conservative action in favor of stable government."

Porto Rico is stated to be flourishing beyond all former experiences; Hawaii's entrance into full territorial relations with the United States government has been marked by the most marvelous progress known in the history of those islands. In the Philippines a "wicked insurrection has been suppressed," and "civil government, contemplating the largest practicable degree of home rule, has succeeded military control. Personal freedom, with an equality of rights heretofore to them unknown, is secured to every inhabitant."

All these things are declared to be due to the "patriotic and brilliant administration of President McKinley," who, in "facing unforeseen and grave responsibilities, has met them prudently, bravely and successfully."

Governor Nash's administration of the state government is declared to have been "wise, able, prudent, honest and economical."

Revision of State Tax Laws.

Revision of the state tax laws are favored in such a manner as shall require all classes of property to bear their just share. The creation of machinery for fixing and equalizing values is recommended. Alleged schemes to cast the entire burden of taxation upon real estate is denounced as unjust. Further legislation in the direction of increasing the state's revenue by forms of taxation other than by levies on real and personal property is also favored.

Full and cordial approval is extended to Senators Foraker and Hanna. Senator Foraker is declared to have rendered "splendid and conspicuous service in our country, and we earnestly endorse him for a second term."

The platform closes by again pledging loyal support to the principles of its declarations and to the party nominees.

Chairman Hanna, in his speech opening the convention, dwelt almost entirely upon the country's prosperity, urging that its continuance depended upon retaining the Republicans in power everywhere.

After eulogizing his colleague in the senate he insisted that the coming contest in Ohio was national in character. He reviewed the administrations of President McKinley, discussed the financial question, and insisted that the country demanded a continuance of confidence in the government in order to have continued prosperity. This is no time, he declared, for financial, industrial or other disturbances. He favored personal liberty, he said, so long as it shall not interfere with the public good.

Governor Nash, in accepting a renomination, reviewed especially the state's finances, declaring the Republican party has so administered them as to be entitled to a continuance in power.

SYMPATHY FOR SECRETARY HAY

Informal Expression of Hope by Cabinet That He Won't Resign.

Washington, June 26.—Official business at the cabinet meeting gave way to expressions of sympathy with Secretary Hay in his bereavement.

The president has received a letter from Secretary Hay stating that after the funeral of his son Adelbert he will return to New Hampshire with Mrs. Hay and remain there for a while. President McKinley has written a letter to Secretary Hay, expressing sympathy and urging him not to give way to his sorrow.

There was at the meeting an informal expression of hope that Colonel Hay will not resign, and should he suggest such a step both the president and the cabinet will advise against it.

Welland Had No Criminal Intent.

Berlin, June 26.—The official North German Gazette, referring to the decision of the imperial court of Leipzig not to prosecute Welland, explains that the public prosecutor and the court were satisfied that Welland was not actuated by criminal intent when he attacked his majesty at Bremen, in March last, and that the emperor was the "victim of a most remarkable concatenation of circumstances."

Mr. D. P. Daugherty, well known throughout Mercer and Sumner counties, W. Va., most likely owes his life to the kindness of a neighbor. THE CONVENTION'S WORK.

The Republicans of Ohio are to be congratulated upon the work performed in their state convention. A ticket composed of the best and ablest Republicans in Ohio was placed in nomination and a platform without a single weak plank was adopted. The ticket is an invincible one, and the declaration of principles will receive the hearty endorsement of every true Republican.

Lieutenant Governor Caldwell, against whom some opposition was manifested, took the wise and manly course of declaring himself out of the race and the place on the ticket, which could have been his had he desired it. It was filled by a young Republican of the highest standing and best character from the lieutenant governor's home city. Thus all possible chance for disaffection and dissatisfaction was removed, and every candidate upon the ticket is sure of a good, round majority at the polls in November.

The campaign is to be fought on Republican principles, which the enemy have challenged, and there can be no fear for the result. Let every Republican do his duty from now until election day is past, and demonstrate to the nation that the grand old Buckeye state allows none to surpass it in loyalty to a progressive national administration or in devotion to the best interests of the whole people.

THE GARBAGE QUESTION.

The garbage question, discussed in interviews in another column, is one that the council and health authorities should give immediate attention. The practice of allowing decaying refuse to stand in open receptacles, on streets and in alleys, during hot weather, is one that cannot be too strongly condemned or too quickly suppressed. There seems to be an urgent demand for an ordinance, such as is in force in other cities, compelling the use of garbage cans with covers, which should be made as nearly airtight as possible. Certainly the noisome odors which now arise in many parts of the city should not be suffered to continue, to breed epidemics during the hot weather.

OHIO RIVER WATER.

Wellsville has found out what her hydrant water contains, but we don't know that she is any happier for it. Such information is of the sort that a learned man of old must have had in mind when he said: "He that increaseth knowledge increaseth sorrow." Wellsville water, according to the state chemist, contains sediment—no microscopic examination necessary to determine that fact—and other things. There are albuminoid, nitrates and nitrites, incrusting constituents and solids in it. There are also what the small boys term "wiggles," these forming 2,300 parts in gals; it is especially strong in a million. That means, if we understand the chemist's lingo, not the number of wiggles, which must be legion, but the mass of them. A million tons of water would contain 2,300 tons of wiggles. And yet a Wellsville contemporary solemnly asserts that "Wellsville drinks the hydrant water undiluted." The wonder is that there is any Wellsville on the map. East Liverpool water would prob-

bly stand analysis no better than that pumped from the river below. But East Liverpool knows better than to drink it. It is bad enough to be constrained to use the stuff to wash in. Down the river still further, the chemist shows, the wiggles increase. At Gallipolis the proportion of bacteria in the liquids and solids is 7,500 parts in a million. Gallipolis gets rid of all these except 23 parts by filtration. The chemist's table carries its moral so plainly on its face that it is quite unnecessary to tell East Liverpool and Wellsville what they ought to do. Will they do it, or continue to use their reservoirs and water systems as propagating grounds for bacteria and disease?

Columns were printed in advance in Democratic newspapers about the big fights that were to be settled at the Ohio Republican convention. There was not the remotest sign of anything but harmony throughout the whole proceedings. Of course Democrats were disappointed, but that is their usual lot. They can't make their predictions of evil regarding the Republican party come true.

The convention at Lisbon on Tuesday furnished the annual reminder that the Democratic party is still struggling to maintain an existence in Columbiana county.

ODOROUS GARBAGE

CAUSES COMPLAINT IN NUMEROUS QUARTERS.

Health Officer in Favor of a Rule Requiring Air-Tight Garbage Cans.

Complaints in great profusion are coming from all parts of the city relative to the disposition of garbage which is thrown into barrels and other receptacles and left in the back yards of residences and about the business houses of the city.

Since summer has come for a certainty and the rays of the shining sun have started the buds and blossoms to sending forth their fragrant aroma, it is not to the liking of a large number of citizens to have these odiferous perfumes blighted by the stench arising from putrid swill cans.

The one great fault that has given rise to the prevailing dissatisfaction regarding the manner in which garbage is disposed of is the neglect of the drivers of the garbage wagon in making their "collections" with necessary regularity. The attention of Sanitary Officer Burgess has been called in a number of instances to unclosed depositories, piled high with disease breeding offal, and allowed to remain as long as two weeks at a time without being emptied, until the heat of the sun had veritably converted them into boiling caldrons of putrescence.

Those who have been exposed to the obnoxious aroma of these poisonous receptacles say there is a vast difference between the smell arising therefrom and that coming from a field of new mown hay. The sanitary officer vouches for the statement that one or two of the swill barrels about town have driven dogs from the neighborhood.

However, it is perhaps unjust to lay the blame for these conditions on the garbage furnace people. While it cannot be disputed that they have neglected in numerous cases to collect the refuse twice a week, as they are supposed to do, the fact that the drivers of the wagon have been having more work on hand than can properly be attended to, accounts for the apparent carelessness. Another wagon is needed badly, and if it is put in use less grumbling would be heard.

During the summer season it does not require much time for a garbage barrel or can to become "ripe," and when it does reach maturity there is nothing so repulsive to the human nostrils. Not only is the odor obnoxious, but physicians say there is nothing which is more likely to breed disease.

Several doctors have already denounced the methods employed in this city in the disposition of garbage. It has been suggested and approved by Sanitary Officer Burgess that, for the present garbage depositories, covered, air-tight receptacles should be substituted. It would perhaps necessitate the passage of an ordinance by council to institute in a general way this new measure of reform, but if it were done the entire populace, with very few exceptions, would sanction the move and consider that a long felt want had thus been filled.

Even on the main streets of the city it is not an uncommon thing to get a whiff of a slop can, and a stranger walking along these exposed thoroughfares could not be criticised for escaping, even to Wellsville.

New Menagerie Features.

Ringling Brothers have many new and notable zoological specimens this season, among others a half dozen Royal Bengal tigers, a pair of rare black tigers, a horned horse or gnu, a bi-horned rhinoceros, a pair of Nile-born hippopotami, and 30 trained elephants. In East Liverpool July 5.

Gleanings Of a Day

In and About

The Local Potteries.

It was learned last evening that negotiations were pending through the main office of the Union Potteries company at Pittsburgh for the purchase of the Steubenville pottery, which, if the efforts are successful, will be added to the two plants already owned by the company.

An effort was made to ascertain the truth of the matter, but the office force at the Union could give no definite information, as the business of the concern is conducted through the Pittsburgh office, and the East Liverpool office would have no means of knowing what was pending until the deal had been consummated. However, it is stated on good authority that the propositions now pending for the purchase of the Ford City, Toronto and Steubenville plants are being favorably considered by the several firms. The Steubenville plant is a seven-kiln pottery employing about 150 men, and has recently been operated steadily.

It is thought the plans of the company will be carried out as they have been planned, and in case they are the Union Potteries company will have a kiln capacity as follows: Union, East

Liverpool, 4 kilns; American, Toronto, 7 kilns; Chelsea, Cumberland, 8 kilns; Steubenville, 7 kilns; Ford City, 18 kilns; total 44 kilns.

S. N. McCarthy, representing the Commoner and Glassworker, of Pittsburgh, was in the city today assisting Mr. Gallaher, the local agent, in completing the details for East Liverpool's share in the special edition of that paper, which it is proposed to issue as a convention number. Mr. McCarthy is one of the best authorities on labor matters in the United States.

Local union No. 9 held an important meeting last evening at which the books of the organization were examined by the auditing committee, as is the custom each year. Everything was found to be in satisfactory condition, and the local's treasury prosperous.

Local union No. 48, warehousemen, has secured new quarters and now meet every Wednesday evening. At the meeting tonight there are four new members to initiate, and three applications to act upon.

HORSEWHIPPED HIM

AKRON PUBLISHER ATTACKED BY YOUNG MEN.

An Alleged Libel in His Paper—His Assaults Arrested Promptly.

Akron, O., June 26.—Albert G. Work, S. H. Kohler and George C. Kohler, young married men, society leaders and wealthy, unmercifully horsewhipped Samuel A. Kennedy, publisher of the Amusement Record, at his home at midnight Monday night. Kennedy is a mass of welts, gashes and bruises. His head is cut open in a dozen places and his back is raw as a beefsteak. His assailants drove to the police station and furnished bond for their appearance this morning.

All last week a sensational rumor concerning the Work and Kohler families was in circulation. Kennedy, it is alleged, tried to sell his silence, but could not. Saturday he published a confirmation of the scandal which is said to be absolutely false. Last night George C. Kohler called Kennedy to the door at his home on Tallmadge avenue, and S. H. Kohler and Work seized him and for 15 minutes beat him with riding whips.

A special grand jury is in session to pass on the publication made by Kennedy. He is charged with criminal libel. Private detectives claim to have found the source from which the story emanated, and this also is being investigated.

Work is superintendent of the Goodrich Rubber company, and worth half a million. S. H. Kohler is vice president of the Akron Varnish company. G. C. Kohler is an attorney. They are sons of Judge J. A. Kohler. They pleaded guilty to assault and battery in police court, and were held in $500 bond until Kennedy is able to appear against them.

How They Broke Up.

An amusing story is related in "Canadian Savage Folk" of the manner in which an adjournment was taken by a mass meeting. A missionary who had started a school among the Indians met with opposition, and the meeting had been called in support of the rival scheme.

There were several speakers who denounced the school in existence. He replied vigorously, showing the efficiency of the school and denouncing in turn the methods adopted by the opposition. An Indian chief produced some specimens of work done at the school, and several speakers supported the work as it was being done. The climax was reached when a gentleman rose and said:

"I move the whole thing bust!" The chairman put the motion. "It is moved and seconded that the whole thing bust!" The audience sprang to their feet and, waving hats, yelled "Busted!" and made for the door. Thus ended the first and last opposition in that matter.

JEFFERSON AT SEVENTY.

The Great Comedian Seems to Have Found Fount of Perpetual Youth.

"In Florida, where Ponce de Leon failed to discover the fountain of perpetual youth, Joseph Jefferson seems to have found it," declares James S. Metcalfe in The Ladies' Home Journal for July. "He is a picturesque figure. His ruddy cheeks and bright eyes give the lie to his 72 years. He is slender, but not with the leanness of age. His hair, mostly black, streaked only here and there with gray and in length showing a wholesome contempt for the fine art of the barber, blows about in the breeze. His fingers are as quick and deft at knotting a line or adjusting a sinker as those of a boy on the banks of a stream, and he enters into every detail with boyish enjoyment. His fishing he alternates with landscape painting, writing and the care of plants.

"In none of these pursuits does he claim professional skill, but he brings to them something more than professional zest. Mr. Jefferson is a very abstemious man. In eating, as in other things, except occupation in the open air, he evidently believes in moderation as a means to well living and long living. He did not join in our after-lunch smoke, stating that if he had not given up tobacco a good many years ago he felt sure that he would not be with us now. Whatever the secret of his long and useful life, it is safe to say that every one of his countless friends and admirers would be glad to lengthen it by a fulfillment of his own Rip's favorite benediction, 'Here's his health and his family's, and may they live long and prosper.'"

It Rained Copper.

The cadets of Annapolis sat in the side aisles of the chapel, leaving the center aisles for the officers and their families, says Dr. Cyrus Townsend Brady in "Under Tops'ls and Tents."

When the offering was received, the two boys charged with the duty of passing the plates did not make the slightest effort to circulate them among the cadets, for we never had any money. They would walk rapidly down the aisle and then come deliberately up the middle, gathering thence what they could. One Sunday the chaplain announced that he would preach a missionary sermon the next Sunday. It did not have the ordinary effect in emptying the church, for we were obliged to go as usual.

During the week it occurred to the bright mind of a senior, or first class man, who is now a prominent New York financier, that it would be well for the cadets to make an offering. So he sent out to the bank on Saturday morning and succeeded in smuggling in over 300 copper cents, which he distributed 1 cent per boy to the Episcopal battalion. We stationed a strong, long armed man on the outside seat of the first pew in each aisle.

The chaplain made a piteous appeal for pennies even, and when the astonished cadets who passed the plates started on their perfunctory promenade the strong, one armed men aforesaid promptly relieved them of the metal plates, and each one dropped in one copper cent with an ominous crash and then deliberately handed the plate to the next boy, who did the same thing. It rained copper cents for about ten minutes. The chaplain was dreadfully disconcerted, the officers fidgeted and looked agast. Some of them laughed, and the cadets preserved a deadly solemnity. The affair was a striking success.

Punishment and Reward.

Optimism. When the optimist was dispossessed and thrown, along with his household impedimenta, into the cold street, he chuckled furiously.

"Why do you laugh, my friend?" inquired a passerby.

"Because I have just now been emancipated from toil," replied the optimist. "For years my life has been one long struggle to keep the wolf from the door. But now that I have been deprived of the door I no longer am compelled to toil. Sweet, indeed, are the uses of adversity!"

Then the optimist walked off, whistling gayly, into the sunshine.—New York Sun.

Tomorrow the first ward school of Pittsburg will be at the park.

TROUBLE AVERTED

Dispute Between Finley Bros. and Street Committee Settled.

The difference between Finley Bros. and the street committee of council terminated without legal trouble. Solicitor O. S. Marshall instructed the street committee to fill the street up to a level with the lot at this point in order to keep the water from forming a pond there. Finley Bros. could not be prevented from filling their lot up if they so desired, according to the opinion of the solicitor.

Mrs. Elmer Henderson left yesterday afternoon for a visit with her brother, P. Albright.

Miss Ora Baker is very ill at her home on Market street with an attack of typhoid fever. She is employed at the West End laundry.

A. G. Bentley and wife and Miss Millie Bentley, of near Randolph, N. Y., who were in attendance at the funeral of A. C. Bentley yesterday, will return to their home tomorrow morning.

W. T. Jenkins returned to his home at Kingwood, W. Va., yesterday afternoon after a visit with John McKinney.

Not Quite What She Meant.

A very stout lady while out walking in a certain part of Edinburg came to a gateway which appeared to be the entrance to a private road. Not being certain, however, she asked one of two messenger boys who were standing at the entrance whether she could get through the gateway or not.

The boy looked her up and down and across. Then, winking to his friend, he replied:

"I donna ken, missus, but think ye might try, as I saw a horse and cart gang through a wee while since."—London Tit-Bits.

appeared on the scene and took Smith in charge. The prisoner was turned over to Officers Dawson and Aufderheide and taken to jail. The policemen were not then aware that Smith had attempted to cut Oleson, and he was given his liberty by putting up $10 security for his appearance before the mayor. He took his departure and when the officers learned of the man's crime he was not to be found.

J. C. Morgan, another colored man from Pittsburg, was arrested by Officers Dawson and Aufderheide for fighting in Hancock's saloon on Second street. He was locked up and this morning received a fine of $5 and costs. Morgan had no money, but claimed to be in the employ of a Pittsburg attorney, who, he said, would pay his fine. Mayor Davidson telephoned to the address furnished him by Morgan and received the assurance that the prisoner's fine would be paid. Morgan was given sufficient money to buy him a ticket to Pittsburg and he left on the noon train.

A fight took place at the corner of Union and Third streets soon after the noon hour, in which two colored women participated. One received an ugly wound over one of her eyes and had her clothing covered with blood.

Two women on the Southside got into a similar mixup in the morning and pommelled each other until friends separated them. Both received some bad cuts and bruises.

One negro was reported to have received 30 cuts from a razor in a fight in Chester.

A report was circulated just before the excursion train left that a colored man had received fatal injuries as the result of a fight which took place near the corner of Broadway and Cook street. This was an error, although a fight did take place there in which one darkey got knocked down a pair of steps and badly hurt.

There were perhaps a score or more of minor "scraps." Scores of women became reeling drunk and many of them had to be almost carried from the saloons in which they had been drinking.

BANK FAILURE IN GERMANY

Had Some Effect on the Stock Market Tuesday—Influence of Some Other Features.

New York, June 26.—Prices of stocks reacted sharply Tuesday and were carried down under such active selling as has not been seen in the market for several weeks past. This development did not make itself felt until late in the day, and after such a period of neglect and apathy on the part of speculative and investment interests as in itself invites to attack on prices by professional bears. There was a continual slight dribble of stocks on the market, under which prices slowly but pretty steadily yielded, except for a few special cases where desultory speculation for the rise centered, or where buying was induced by causes individual to stocks. These were entirely without influence on the general list. A rather general tendency to recover from some opening declines had the edge taken off it by the first bulletin announcement of the suspension of an important bank in Leipzig. The course of German bank shares for the last few days has indicated an unsettled condition of affairs in Germany, and Tuesday's occurrence arouses apprehension that the coming semi-annual settlements in Berlin may be the occasion of a more or less extended collapse.

With the gain in cash this week and the receipt next week of the New York gold shipments, the banks' cash reserves will be lifted to near $250,000,000. The banks' outstanding note issues are also nearly $100,000,000 below the legal maximum exempt from taxation. So that the German money market is unusually well equipped to meet a crisis. The consideration of these conditions made the speculative mind sensitive, and late in the day, when many rumors began to circulate of local banking troubles, there was a lively spilling out of stocks all through the list. The bears made the most of their unexpected opportunity and offered prices down boldly while the rumors were at the high tide of exaggeration. They succeeded in breaking through the defenses which had been established by the bull leaders while they were away for their vacations and stop loss orders were uncovered. Stocks with any large speculative accounts in them were naturally most affected. St. Paul and Missouri Pacific were conspicuous in the decline, as were a number of less prominent stocks which were marked up in the early dealings Tuesday. The drop in St. Paul extended to five points. When the nature of the investigation being made by the clearing house association of the affairs between one of the banks and the association became more accurately known and it was announced that no action would be necessary there was a lively scramble on the part of professional shorts to cover, and the rally in the principal active stocks was between one and two points. St. Paul recovered 2½, Missouri Pacific 2¼ and Manhattan 2¼. But the closing was not free from feverishness and was rather irregular. The money market was not disturbed, the somewhat easier tone of Monday being maintained. The earlier gains in the market were from causes peculiar to the stocks affected, such as has been the move of these movements for several days past.

The bond market was affected by the late selling, but in a much less degree than stocks. Total sales, par value, $2,770,000.

THE PLACUE IN HONOLULU.

Four Cases Reported—Corbin May Not Land There, but Go on to Manila.

Washington, June 26.—In view of a dispatch received at the war department from General Shafter, at San Francisco, reporting four deaths from the bubonic plague at Honolulu, between May 29 and June 9, Assistant Secretary Sanger has telegraphed General Shafter to confer with General Corbin, and, if it is deemed desirable, to coal the Hancock so as to sail direct through to Manila. It was the intention of General Corbin, who is to sail for Manila on the Hancock, to stop at Honolulu and make an examination of Camp McKinley at that point, but the bubonic plague report may change his plans.

According to General Shafter's message, the president of the Honolulu board of health believes he has the plague situation well in hand.

SCORED THE RIPPER BILL.

President Scott Spoke to Pennsylvania Bar Association.

Bedford, Pa., June 26.—The seventh annual meeting of the Pennsylvania Bar association was held in the ballroom of the Bedford Springs hotel, about 300 members being present. The meeting was called to order at 10 a. m. The president of the association, William Scott, of Pittsburg, made an address, during the course of which he scored the "ripper" bill, declaring that the existence of such an unlimited power in the legislature in regard to municipalities is liable to gross abuse, and suggesting some limitation by constitutional amendment.

Special committee reports were made by E. Z. Smith and Thomas Patterson, of Pittsburg. A minute was presented to the association on the death of Edward P. Allison, of Philadelphia, the first secretary of the association, to whom Judge Simonton, of Dauphin county, Samuel Dickson and William Penn Lloyd paid tributes. Ex-Attorney General W. U. Hensel, of Lancaster, presented the portrait of Mr. Allison to the association, given by Mr. Allison's wife and family, which President Scott received with a minute of respect and appreciation was then adopted.

The annual address was made last evening by H. M. Rose, of Arkansas.

To be honest, to be kind, to earn a little and to spend less, to make, upon the whole, a family happier by his presence, to renounce where that shall be necessary and not to be inebriated, to keep a few friends, but these without capitulation; above all, on the same grim conditions to keep friends with himself—here is a task for all that a man has of fortitude and delicacy.—Robert Louis Stevenson.

NOT LIKE OTHER MEN

By Frederic Van Rensselaer Dey,

Copyright, 1901, by Frederic Van Rensselaer Dey.

"Well done, sonny!" shouted the stranger. "Mighty well done for a young man like you. What outfit are you with?"

"Maxwell's. The bunch is two or three miles behind me, to the east."

"Dick Maxwell's, eh? Crescent and cross," naming the brand worn by Richard Maxwell's cattle. "What may your name be?"

"Lisle Maxwell."

"Good, good! So you're Dick Maxwell's kid. You're a young man, sure enough, but you ain't as young as you look unless I'm mightily mistaken. I saw you when you first came to this region, and that's nigh on to 17 years ago. You must have been most 2 then. How old are you, anyway?"

"I am 18."

"Well, you don't look it; not by two or three years. Is the old man with the outfit?"

"Yes."

"What are you doing here? Why ain't you back with the bunch?"

"That's my business, sir. At all events, it doesn't concern you."

The stranger chuckled audibly.

"I've heard tell that you was sassy," he said, "but you ought to wait till you grow more'n you have before you try your sass on strangers. Some of 'em ain't as good natured as I am. Never here afore, was you?"

"Never."

Lisle looked upon his companion with added interest then, for indeed he had heard of Craig Thompson, and not much good of him had been told either.

A man who is thoroughly feared is never cordially liked, and Craig Thompson was one of those. He was a strange admixture of gentleman and rough, a college bred man who for nearly 30 years had been adapting himself to the circumstances of his surroundings and gradually had become a part of them. He was one of those men whose age it is impossible to estimate, for he appeared at once older and younger than he really was. His alertness and energy subtracted from his years, while his gray hair and beard and weather beaten skin added to the estimate that one placed upon them. With the exception of Lisle's father, he owned more cattle than any other man on the range, and he had been in Nevada longer than any of his neighbors. But all of this had nothing to do with his reputation. That was derived from a habit of his that was known and feared by every one who knew him. There were frequently weeks at a time when he was possessed by what was known as his sullen fits, and during those periods it was as much as a man's life was worth to speak to him and certainly to cross him. When he came out of them, he was as loquacious as he had previously been taciturn, as kindly as he had formerly been ugly, as gentle as he had been rough, as tender as he had been hard and cruel and murderous. He was a strange mixture of saint and devil, of kindness and brutality, of generosity and merciless cruelty—a paradox and that which begets more outside interest than any other human attitude, a mystery.

"Why ain't you ever been here before, sonny?" he asked presently. "Or maybe that ain't any of my business either."

"My father would not permit me to come."

"Oh, that's it, eh? And he gave in this time, did he?"

"No."

Craig Thompson chuckled again.

"Don't you see, Lisle, that you have answered my question? That's why you're ahead of the bunch. Just jumped the stockade, flew the corral, lit out, stamped all by yourself, same's that steer you roped in such good style, and Dick thinks you're rounded up safe and sound at home, eh? Is that the ticket?"

"That is exactly the situation, Mr. Thompson," replied Lisle slowly. "When I first saw you swinging after the steer, I was wondering whether I had better keep down the valley or turn back and meet my father. But you have answered the question for me, for now I've got to help you in with this steer."

"Humph! Look here, Lisle. Just consider that we've shook hands, will you? That makes us friends. Now, I'm going to give you some advice, and it strikes me that for a kid who has passed all his life, if it ain't only 18 years, punching cattle, roping steers, shooting stars out of the sky and occasionally plinking an Indian or a maverick man—for that's what I've heard about you—you need it as much as any fellow I know. In the first place, don't 'mister' any of the boys up here on this mesa, or they'll make a curiosity out of you before you're 24 hours your present senior. In the second place, when you have once started out to do a thing don't turn back on any account. If it or drop in your tracks facing it. It's a whole lot better to be shot between the eyes than it is to be kicked behind. That ain't elegant, but it's God's truth. In the third place, tie up to Craig Thompson for anything that you can foresee at this writing, and if

They were soon relieved of the care of the steer, and then they rode on silently side by side for some distance.

"Why wouldn't Dick ever let you come here before?" asked Thompson presently.

"I don't know. He would never tell me," replied Lisle.

"Well, I can tell you."

"You can! Why is it?"

"I'll tell you by asking a question or two. Didn't you wing one of my cowboys, a fellow named Cummings, about a year ago when he was over at your place after a bunch of steers that had strayed away?"

"Yes."

"What did you do it for?"

"Because he was impertinent."

"Exactly. What did he say?"

"Correct. He ain't forgot it, and he won't very soon. He's gone back east, but he left a piece of one of his ribs out here to remember you by. However, that is why Dick don't want you to come here. See?"

"No."

"He's afraid somebody else will say the same thing; that's all."

Lisle brought his horse to a sudden stand. His face darkened and his black eyes flashed ominously.

"Do you say the same thing?" he asked quietly, but in a tone which conveyed much more than did the words that were uttered.

"Lord, what a fire eater you are! No! I don't say the same thing, but it would be a compliment if I did, for women are a hanged sight better than men. But that ain't here nor there. Some of the boys will say it, or something very much like it, and if you are going to shoot every one that does you had better lose no time in selecting a good place to start your graveyard. You won't be long in filling it."

"Why should they say such a thing as that?"

"I'll not be angry."

"Good. Well, I s'pose it's because you ain't developed much. You're 18, and you look in some ways like a boy of 14. Your voice ain't changed enough to suit the taste of such people as like to arrange other people's affairs for 'em. That's one thing. It's a good voice, but it's soft and tender and kinder cooling, like a girl's. 'Twon't hurt it any if you add a pound or two to its weight."

"What else?"

"Nothing else that I can just put my finger on unless it's your whole outfit. You have spent so much of your time in the house reading and studying, playing your piano and such like that your face has got something in it that men don't wear much out here. It's called refinement, and these cusses round here think that all the refinement in the world belongs to women. I want you to understand that every reason that any of the crowd such as you will find here can have for telling you that you are like a woman is a compliment, and you ought to take it as one. Don't get mad. Smile and look pleased, for, Lisle, there ain't no better thing on the top of God's earth than a good woman."

"I don't believe that you know," said Lisle quietly, but with such deep conviction that Thompson gazed at him earnestly for a moment in silence.

"Don't I?" he said presently in a voice that was perceptibly altered.

"Well, maybe I don't, but I think I do. Some day, maybe, I'll tell you the story that makes me think so. Now, tell me why you said that."

"My father has taught me ever since I can remember that women are the curse of the world, and I believe him. He is wise concerning everything else, and he would not instruct me falsely."

An audible grunt was the only reply that Craig Thompson made, and the two rode on in silence several rods.

"I would like to see a woman," remarked Lisle, permitting his train of thought to end in a spoken sentence, "I have never seen one in my life."

"Whoa!" cried Thompson, pulling his horse up with a jerk. Then he jammed his spurs deep into the animal's sides, so that it snorted and made two or three buck jumps before it settled down again into ordinary decorum. The ranchman's face was working in the strangest fashion, but whether with an effort to suppress a laugh or an oath it is impossible to say. At last, more to himself than to the young man at his side, the Nevada man remarked:

"Any man who will give a boy that sort of fodder to chew on is a blamed scoundrel."

Lisle Maxwell heard the words. He halted his horse as suddenly as Thompson had previously checked his and by a sudden pressure of one of his knees compelled it to turn so that it stood directly across the path of the other animal. His right arm straightened out,

"Take that back, Craig Thompson," said Lisle in a low tone, but there was an intense meaning behind the words. The ranchman had never been nearer death than at that instant, and he knew it. But he only smiled, and there was something in the altered expression of his face which Nevadans were not accustomed to see there. All the hard lines had disappeared. All the harshness was gone, and his eyes, which ordinarily gave back a steely glitter for every gaze which they encountered, softened into a translucent sparkle while he said slowly:

"I'll take it back, Lisle, every word of it, for the Lord knows that I never meant it to sound as you took it. You needn't put your gun down till I've got through talking, 'cause I've got something to say, and after that, if you want to use it on me, you can go ahead, and I won't make any kick. I like you, Lisle, and I would honor you for killing me if you did it to resent an imputation against your father. I spoke on general principles. And now you listen. You've heard lots of bad things about me, and supposing me to be as bad as them reports, do you think it would be logical to believe every other man in the world bad because I am or every

that the heart of a young man could desire, and his father had been his tutor in everything. Particularly had his instruction been thorough in every branch of knowledge which properly should belong to young manhood, and Lisle could not remember when anybody save his father had waited upon his wishes—at least until he was old enough to go abroad. After that the cowboys instructed him in riding and lasso throwing. He could ride like an Apache Indian, rope the wildest steer that ever trod the ranges of Nevada, shoot from the back of his galloping horse with revolver or rifle infallible articles thrown into the air by his admiring instructors; he could leap from his horse to the ground and mount again while the creature was upon a mad run and could cast his handkerchief or his hat upon the plain and then, dashing past at the topmost speed of his horse, pick it up again; he could catch and mount and successfully ride the wildest and most untamed horse that ever belonged on Crescent and Cross ranch. There was nothing along those ranges that man could do which he had not been taught to do and to do well, better even than his instructors, and as a proficient in every manly sport—in marksmanship, horsemanship and courage—he was known and admired throughout that wide circle which had its yearly rendezvous in the Smoky valley.

Richard Maxwell had lived up to the statement he made to his lawyer 17 years ago. Lisle Maxwell was a boy in every generally accepted sense of the word. He had grown up as a boy and lived as a boy. He had studied as a boy and thought as a boy, and he had no conception of what girls and women were other than that they were something to be religiously avoided. Regarding the question of sex, his father had kept him as profoundly ignorant as a babe, and the words "girl" and "woman" were to him only terms for the expression of a thought, and that thought he had been taught to regard as repugnant. Indian women—squaws—he had seen frequently, but he had not observed much difference between them and the men except that they were uglier, more brutal and dirtier. Throughout all his studies, and they were manifold and thorough, books calculated to direct his thoughts into channels which might reveal to him his real identity had been rigorously excluded, and he had no more idea who and what he really was than he possessed 17 years ago when sleeping upon his father's arm he was stolen away from his mother's loving care. That is why the masculine pronoun is used now in referring to him.

One can understand how such a man as Richard Maxwell might accomplish all this without once making a mistake. Every question asked by the growing child was answered directly, concisely and decisively and with words that bordered so nearly upon the whole truth that they left that part which was unrevealed apparently unworthy of mention. There was a code of morals on that ranch compared with which the rigid rules of a Shaker settlement would be a travesty, and the cowboy who once forgot or neglected them related his forgetfulness thereafter in the employ of another man than Richard Maxwell.

The interior of the house where Lisle had passed all these years was lavishly extravagant. Nothing was left to be desired. Abyssinia's greatest king could not have provided a happier valley for a new Rasselas, with the exception that there was no Dinaris with whom to share its joys. The entire place, inside and outside, presented the spectacle of the abode of a man who had regulated his whole life to the fulfillment of one idea and had succeeded. Seventeen years had not, in a single particular, witnessed the avoidance of one of the multitudinous cares rendered necessary for the fulfillment of a theory such as his, utterly impracticable in its conception and scientifically impossible of completion, and yet Lisle Maxwell had arrived at the age of 18 without once imagining that woman is a necessary quantity in existence and in the perpetuation of mankind.

Nature had in some ways conspired with Richard Maxwell, for she had not hastened her work of development. Neither had she retarded it, but she had done for Lisle what she rarely does for woman. Muscular development had kept pace with feminine growth, so that as yet there was nothing about the figure of Richard Maxwell's son to suggest that he was not what he appeared to be. The sun had browned his naturally olive tinted skin so that the rich, red blood beneath could only suggest its presence by imparting a deeper tinge, and his coarse, dark hair, through which glistened a faint suggestion of burnished copper, was kept half shorn, so that it fell in wavy and rebellious masses beneath the broad brim of his Texas sombrero. She had given his brilliant eyes a certain boldness of expression which does not belong to women, and there was a poise about his head which had nothing suggestive of the feminine about it. The loose garments in which he was costumed were certainly and yet imperceptibly different from those of his companions, due in every instance to suggestions from the father, who never forgot nor neglected anything that had to do with his purposes.

Craig's interview with the ranch owner had been short, and when he came away after it was over he was no better informed concerning what the outcome of Lisle's disobedience

man good because your father is? 'Tain't sense, is it? If you know enough to know that we're all born of women, and I suppose you do, you know that a woman was your mother, and there's one little fact you want to tie to all your life, because if you don't there won't be anything else that is worth trying to. It's this: Your mother was a good woman if every other woman ever born into the world was bad, and so was my mother and the mother of every one of that wild set of fellows that'll soon be raising hades around here. A woman may be bad before she's a mother, and she may be 'bad after she's a mother, but there ain't no exceptions to the rule that every one of 'em is good when she's a mother, so, you see, Lisle, I didn't cast any reflections on your father when I said that. I only took your mother's part without thinking of him at all, and I wouldn't be of much account as a friend to you or to any man if I didn't do that. That's right, put up your gun. Now, shall we shake hands? That's the ticket. Maybe when you know me better you'll know me better."

Then, side by side, in the beginning of a friendship which was destined to continue through bitter trials for Lisle Maxwell, they rode into camp just as the van of Dick Maxwell's outfit rose over the ridge where their acquaintance began.

CHAPTER III.

HAD BEEN TAUGHT TO BE A MAN.

DURING the remainder of that day Craig Thompson impressed everybody who knew him with the idea that he was on the point of having one of his dreaded "fits," but if any one of them had studied him closely he would have known better, for the expression of his face was childlike in its gentleness. But his loquacity was gone, for he was thinking. He had volunteered and been accepted as the intermediary between son and father, and his interview with Richard Maxwell had left upon him an impression which he was endeavoring, without success, to define. Lisle had objected to intermediation, believing the direct way to be the best, but Craig convinced him that his own way was preferable and had dispatched him on a supposedly important errand to a herdsman who had charge of an outlying bunch of cattle.

Richard Maxwell was a natural martinet. Clockwork was not more exact than were the rules of his life, from which he never deviated. His employees liked him, but at the same time they feared him. The slightest disobedience was regarded as a resignation from his employ, and Lisle was in this respect as subservient to him as they were. Maxwell was a handsome man too. Although his hair and perfectly trained mustache were as white as snow, there was not a line upon his perfect face. His eyes were his most remarkable features, for there was within their depths something so somber, so threatening, so fierce and so repellent that strangers instinctively avoided them and then looked again to discover the cause. But it was undiscoverable. The more one looked the more obscure seemed the reason for avoidance, for the surface glance upon them, although searching and deep, had nothing in it of those qualities which at first repelled. His eyes were undeniably large, and they described a perfect oval. If eyes can be intensely black, his were so, and in hue the long lashes which fringed them and the rather heavy brows that shaded them were blacker still.

You would not have said that Lisle's eyes were like his father's, but you would have insisted that Richard Maxwell's eyes were like his son's, with the difference that where the glance of the elder man repelled that of the younger attracted.

Lisle Maxwell's training had been all

would be than he was before it began.

The only change that had taken place in the appearance of Richard Maxwell since that night 17 years ago when he had called upon his lawyer with the baby in his arms can be summed up in the white hair and the bronzed skin which time and exposure had imparted. In all other respects he was the same. He and Thompson were known to each other. During the time that Maxwell had spent in Nevada they had often met, so that no introduction was necessary.

"How are you, Maxwell?" was Thompson's greeting when they met, and they shook hands cordially.

"Glad to see you, Thompson," was the rejoinder. "The boys are getting the stock in rather earlier than usual this year, are they not?"

"A little. There's more of it to get in. I've got three or four thousand extra. You must have as many."

"More, I think."

He did not look up as he made the remark. If he had, he would not have seen the slightest alteration in the expression of his companion. But Maxwell did not immediately answer. When he did, it was to ask a question.

"He has arrived, then?" he asked quietly.

"Yes; about an hour or two ago. I met him out on the ridge while I was chasing a steer that would have given me a deuce of a run if it hadn't been for young Lisle's rope. He said he wasn't coming to the round up, but I had to have some help to get that critter in, so I persuaded him to come along. Then he volunteered to ride out to a distant bunch of mine, and that's where he is now, I reckon. I wish I had a kid like him."

"If you see him before I do, will you send him to me?" said Maxwell.

"Sure. I say, Maxwell, have you messed with anybody yet?"

"No. I shall follow my old custom and mess with my own outfit. Thank you all the same."

"Humph!" thought Thompson as he moved away from the presence of Lisle's father. "I'll bet a dozen of the best 5-year-olds in my bunch that Dick Maxwell is madder'n a hornet, only he'll be hanged if he'll show it." Then he mounted his horse and dashed away in the direction that Lisle had taken.

The death list seems con-to the limit of 60, nearly all of were negro miners and their families. The railroad loss is just than $1,000,000 and that to the operations slight. The dominant is the stoppage of work at the

supply. The Pocahontas mine

may never be known just how many people were drowned. Many of the families represented little more in
the way of identification than a name.
Only neighbors knew each other and systematic listing of the missing is
not attempted.

Will Burn Wreckage.

The railroad authorities will burn
the vast accumulation of wreckage to
prevent it from making dams at the
bridges and also to preserve health.
The coke ovens were broken down by
the freight cars hurled against them.
About 150 houses in Keystone were
washed away, all the company houses
at Elkfork and a number were washed
away at Shawnee and Burke. Robert
M. Garrett, a Keystone druggist,
as chairman, has organized a relief
committee and is raising money to
give to the poor whites and negroes
whose houses were destroyed and who
lost will save clothes on their backs.
The people are poor, the crops are
the worst in years, and some misery
will undoubtedly ensue. The coal operators declare they can care for
their own people, and are doing so.
This will probably be true of all operators except at Keystone, which in
a way is a renegade settlement. The
operators resent mildly outside help,
saying it is not needed.

Colonel Charles H. Howell, president
of the Philadelphia branch of the Red Cross society; Colonel Hut-
son, of the governor's staff, and E. L.
Boggs, private secretary to Governor
A. B. White, arrived on the scene,
only to find that the loss of life was small. There is little actual suffering among the people, their normal condition being almost as bad as at
present.

Colonel Howell penetrated the flooded
district to Vivian, finding no use
for the Red Cross, and last evening,
before leaving for Philadelphia, wired
the headquarters of the society that
the losses were in money and property of the railroad and coal operators, and that there was no use for
the Red Cross.

Bodies Washed From Graves.

Roanoke, June 26.—A gentleman arriving in this city Tuesday from the
stricken section gives an explanation
for the report first circulated
that great masses of human bodies
were to be seen floating around in the
water that there is a graveyard between North Fork Junction and Key-
stone, which towns are about a mile
apart, and at which point the storm
was very severe. This graveyard is near the bank of the river. When the flood came the graves gave up their
dead and added greatly to the number
of bodies seen.

STANDS FOR PRINCIPLES.

Mr. Bryan Says He Has No Ambitions
For Office.

Watertown, N. Y., June 26.—W. L.
Bryan arrived in this city
about noon Tuesday. He was met by
a large crowd and given an enthusiastic reception. Tuesday afternoon
he addressed a large audience at the state armory on the subject of "Civilization." Last evening he lectured
again on "The Conquering Nation."
An admission was charged to both
lectures.

Buffalo, June 26.—The following,
over the signature of Mr. William Jennings Bryan, appeared in The Times,
Mr. Norman E. Mack's paper, Tues-
day afternoon:

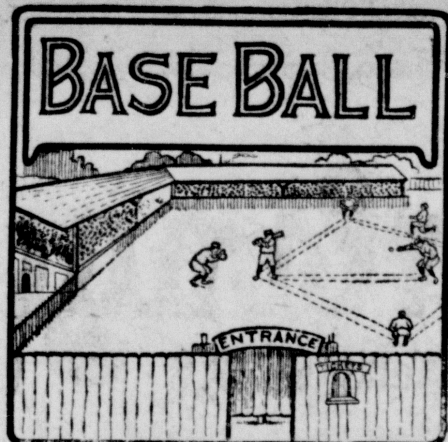

"I am not only not a candidate for
any office, but I have no candidate in mind for any office. My interest centers in principles, and men are important only as they aid in carrying
out these principles.

"The Democratic party stands for
definite, positive principles, and unless I mistake the sentiments of the
masses, the voters will insist upon adhering to these principles. Those who argue from the standpoint of
expediency will not have influence
with the voters, because no one can
say what is expedient. We may de-
serve to win and yet lose, but it still
remains that to deserve to win is the
surest road to success."

JOSEPH COOK, FAMOUS LECTURER, DEAD.

White Hall, N. Y., June 26.—Joseph
Cook, lecturer and author, is dead at his home in Ticonderoga. He has been in ill health for several years.
Mr. Cook is best remembered by his efforts to show, in his lectures, the many of the Bible with science.

Ed. Biddle Says He's Innocent.
Pittsburg, June 26.—Edward Biddle,
who was convicted of the murder of
Thomas Kahney, wrote a letter to
Mrs. Patrick Fitzgerald, in which he asserts his innocence. She says the
letter inspired her recent utterances
that she believes Biddle is not guilty
of the murder of her husband.

There never has been a time in the
history of professional baseball when
the thinking men of the game were
more deeply concerned than they are
at present.

The glorious pastime has withstood
adversity and many severe trials, especially during the Brotherhood outbreak of nearly a dozen years ago. That fight, however, was simply a battle between the club owners and the players,
and, as so generally happens, the money-
ed men of the game were better organized, and the players, the workmen
of the game, were beaten. Now the conditions are entirely different, and the outcome is being watched with considerable interest by every one concerned.

The agreement which holds the National league club owners together will

JAMES MCGINNITY, "THE IRON MAN."

expire with the present season. This
would not have meant much ten years
ago, but at present it does, for the simple reason that the veteran owners of
the various clubs are not the happy
family one would expect to find where
interests are so identical. The sentiment against Freedman of New York,
while nicely cloaked, is as positive as
ever, and no love is lost between the
other club owners and the two men
who control the Philadelphia club.

Also the feeling at Boston and Chicago is not of the brotherly or fraternal sort. The presence of the hustling American league in the field, the lukewarm loyalty of the minor leagues and
the organization of the Players' association will prove to be important factors in the readjustment of the baseball schedules for next year.

I am still of the opinion that the two
major leagues will come together before the end of the present season simply as a means of self protection. If
this is done, the minor leagues will
quickly fall into line, and the players'
grievances can be adjusted in short or-
der. If this is not done, the baseball
conditions next spring will be chaotic
in the extreme, and baseball stock in
large and small cities will not be worth
what it is today.

And the players themselves can do
much at this time to help bring order
out of the tangle. The leaders in the association of green diamond knights
realize that contract jumpers and players whose word is worthless are a real
menace to the sport. If they can prevent wholesale jumping in case of disruption, they will do much to preserve
the integrity of the sport.

I am told that when the warring
factions come together N. E. Young
will retire from the head of National
league affairs and that his successor
will in all probability be Ban Johnson.
Until recently the man named as the
logical successor of Young had considerable support from the other club owners, but he appears to have lost much
of his popularity during the last month.

That Young will retire seems assured,
and the game will lose one of its most
honest and faithful servants. Young
has labored earnestly for the game for
a quarter of a century, and his work
entitles him to recognition. May his successor be as earnest, intelligent and
honest!

Already arrangements are being perfected for the further invasion of American teams to Cuba next winter. The only hitch at present is that the Cubans show a disposition to want the best without going through the formalities of paying for it. This difference promises to be adjusted within
the next few weeks.

Thomas Simpson, the secretary of
the Brooklyn club, is the American
representative of the Cuban Baseball
association and the man who took two teams to Cuba last winter. Owing to disagreements the venture was not a
success, although the promoters practically lost nothing.

The next teams to be taken to Cuba
will be made up of a sprinkling of old
stars and filled in with young and ambitious minor league players. Teams
of this sort will play good ball and yet
not make a show of the Cubans, whose
opinion of their own ability on the green diamond field is decidedly inflated.

The dark skinned natives like the
game and will wager their money on
everything connected with the sport.
The favorite bet of the Cuban is that
the batsman will or will not reach first base. He does not care how he gets
there, for with him it is simply a

There are several concerns advertising Furniture in Magazines
using the time worn "Factory Price" scheme. They tell you they

case of "does or doesn't." Getting his
base on balls or on an error is just as
great an achievement in the eyes of the Cuban as if he had made a corking
drive good for a base or two. After
reaching first base the betting is continued that he won't reach second,
and then third, and so on.

Plungers in wide rimmed hats walk
through the stands announcing their
willingness to wager various sums, and
they are taken up with all of the gambling fever so prevalent in southern
countries. But the Cubans don't like to be beaten too badly, and consequen-
ly the teams to be taken there should
not be up to the playing strength of
the National or American league organization.

Of the pitchers in the American
league this year Griffith, Katol, Car-
rick and McGinnity have all done good
work. McGinnity of Baltimore is showing himself to be the same "iron man"
as of old, and nobody need be surprised if at the close of the present season
he has pitched in more games than any
of the other twirlers.

McGinnity learned early how to save
his strength when delivering the ball
to the batsman, which accounts not
only for his success, but for his wonderful endurance. His preliminary
movements are of the sort to add speed
and control to his delivery and are not
of the back, neck, shoulder and arm
straining sort adopted by so many of the other pitchers. In thus saving his strength he has it when compelled to
use it.

Heidrick, Van Haltren, Strang and Sheppard are doing some great work
this year both in the field and at the
bat. Strang is a little chap, but has won his spurs quickly this year. Van Haltren, his running mate, is old
enough to be his father, yet the veteran
never played better ball than he is doing today. He is as spry as a kitten
and is positively fast on his feet. Heid-
rick of St. Louis will come pretty close
to leading the country with the bat
this year. Robinson has the end of the year in this young man in my opinion.

While on the topic of successful players it should not be forgotten that the Eastern league has developed a young-
ster this year for whose services there
will be a wild scramble at the close of
the season. Homer Smoot of the Worcester team already has a batting
average of over .400, and if he can continue to keep up the good work with
the stick his future is assured, for the
heavy and scientific hitter is what really counts in baseball after all. Batting
is a gift; the player can learn the other departments of the game. Smoot
did not miss hitting safely in his first 25 games, quite a record for a youngster.

Woman's Horror

Modest women dread to consult a doctor about
diseases peculiar to their sex. They have a horror
of private examinations and surgical operations. For this reason treatment of dangerous derangements is neglected. But the Wine of Cardui treatment, which can be adopted at home without the knowledge of any
one but the patient herself, is now coming into general
use. Women who take Wine of Cardui do not have to submit to a physician's local examination nor to a surgical operation. Wine of Cardui cures in the privacy
of the home. No publicity, no cutting and torture and
no physician or examination, while Wine of Cardui is
quietly building up and strengthening the female organs.
Menstruation is regulated, the drains of leucorrhoea
stopped and the fallen womb restored to its place. The terrible pains which rack the body are but
results of the ailments, which yield so readily
to the soothing properties of Wine of Cardui.
The medicine that cured Miss Garlen will certainly help you.

Wine of Cardui

Rockford, Tenn., Aug. 15, 1899.
I have suffered from womb trouble
for five years. Last spring a year
ago I was bedfast for six months. I saw 22 to one doctor, and he said he had done all he could for me. I had
about given up, but called another doctor,
who said I would have to have surgical
treatment. I decided I might as well die a natural death as that. I happened to get hold of a Ladies' Birthday Almanac, and decided to try your treatment. In nine days after I commenced taking Wine of Cardui and Black-Draught I could walk across my room, and in three weeks I made myself a dress. This was after my neighbors, and even my brothers and sisters, said I would never be any better. I am now in good health.

Now They Are Married.
A bashful young man went three
times to ask a beautiful young lady if
he might be the partner of her joys and
sorrows and other household furniture,
but each time his heart failed him, and
he took the question away unopened.
She saw the anguish of his soul and
had compassion on him. So the next
time he came she asked him if he had thought to bring a screwdriver with
him.
He blushed and wanted to know
what for.
And she, in the fullness of her heart,
said she did not know but that he
before he left.
He took the hint and the girl.—Pear-

FOR KILLBOURNE

Columbiana Democrats Instruct Delegates—The County
Ticket.

Lisbon, June 26.—(Special.)—The Columbiana county Democratic convention yesterday adopted resolutions
condemning "the colonial policy of the Republican administration which had
been declared constitutional by a partisan supreme court"; declared the
government was in the hands of a
money power directed by M. A. Hanna, the prince of financial magnates;
condemning also the alleged corrupt
expenditure of public money by state
and county officials.

The delegates to the state convention were instructed to support Kilbourne for governor. The following
county ticket was placed in nomination: Representative, J. C. Walsh, of
East Liverpool; sheriff, S. F. Leonard,
Wellsville; auditor, William Burns,
Salineville; treasurer, O. S. Bryan,
Franklin township; commissioner, W.
C. Wallace, Unity township; infirmary director, Frank Gruber, Hanover town-
ship.

The following delegates to the state
convention were appointed: George
B. Aten, Al Carlisle, Dr. A. W. Schil-
ler, Ed Crook, J. C. Walsh, T. F. Arnold, William Burnes, John Dowler, W.
E. Raugh, W. J. Foley, W. H. Spence,
T. J. Forner.

The vote on instructing for Kil-
bourne was about 10 to 1. Al Carlisle made a strong address extolling Kilbourne as the working man's friend.

David Black, of Salineville, was
chosen county chairman.

Sense of Touch In Surgery.

There has been of late more or less
discussion on the use of antiseptic
gloves. These articles are strongly objected to, however, by experienced surgeons, who claim that the surgeon ac-
quires a sense of touch that is of very
great value to him in performing delicate and complicated operations. So acute does this become that even the extent of disease may almost be determined by it. They believe that it is possible to exercise sufficient care in the
washing of hands and the application
of antiseptics to make such gloves
wholly unnecessary. Be this as it may,
the best surgeons are very reluctant to
adopt anything that interferes with the
delicacy of handling, which is their
chief pride and upon which to a great
extent the safety of the patient depends.

KILLED NUMBER 15.

Report Received From Disastrous Wreck on Wa-
bash Railroad.

TRESTLE WAS WASHED OUT.

Train Was Running at High Speed to Make Up Lost Time, When It
Dashed into Washout, About Five
Miles From Logansport, Ind.

Indianapolis, June 26.—A special to
The Sentinel from Peru, Ind., about
2:30 this morning said:

Westbound passenger train No. 3,
on the Wabash railroad, ran into a
washout at Cass, about 15 miles west
of here, at 12:30 o'clock this morning,
wrecking the engine and five cars.
It is reported 15 persons were killed.
The train is due at Peru at 10:55,
but left here one hour late in charge
of Conductor Brownley.

The train was running at high
speed to make up lost time, and when
nearing Cass a switch, five miles east
of Logansport, plunged through a
trestle that had been swept away by
a washout, caused by the recent heavy
rains.

The engine was totally demolished
and the three passenger coaches and
two baggage cars were derailed and
overturned.

Every doctor in Peru was summoned and the relief party left here
at midnight for the scene of the wreck. Details are meagre, but it is rumored that Engineer Butler, Fire-
man Adams and at least a dozen passengers were killed and many more
injured.

FATAL STORM IN NEWARK.

Lightning Struck Slate Roof—One
Killed and Four Injured.

Newark, O., June 26.—One man
dead and four injured, thousands of dollars damage to property and many
trees and much grain destroyed, is
the record of a storm which swept
through a small section of North New-
ark.

The Edward H. Everett Glass Bottle company recently completed a fine
new factory, increasing its force to nearly 1,200 people. Their new factory was struck by lightning and the
strong wind caused about 100 feet of
the slate roof to fall, spreading terror
among the workmen. Five were caught under the mass of slate and
timber, as follows:

Louis Cunningham, a laborer out-
side the building, was struck by a
flying slate, which cut his neck and
slit open his abdomen, causing death
within a few hours.

Walter Dickinson, fracture of one
leg and one arm.

Arthur Fleming, head slightly cut.

George Hasmeier, arm sprained.

Will Douglas, left leg fractured and
back hurt.

DECLARED KILLING ACCIDENTAL

Remarkable Story of Young Man,
Who Admits Killing His Father.

Mount Clemens, Mich., June 26.—
Homer Bliss, who was arrested several days ago on suspicion of killing
his father, whose badly decomposed
body was found on his farm, confessed to the killing, maintaining,
however, that it was accidental. According to Bliss' confession he found
his father, June 3, about to commit
suicide. In the struggle over the gun
he had it was accidentally discharged, Homer says, instantly killing the
father.

The next day Homer buried the
body, leaving it in the ground until June 14, when he exhumed it. Placing it on a wheelbarrow, he moved it
to the spot where it was found last Saturday. Here he propped it against
a stump and tied the gun to a sapling
to make it appear his father had
committed suicide.

SOME READING STRIKERS FIRM.

President Baer's Letter Meets With Open Defiance by Many.

Reading, Pa., June 26.—Not a
dozen of the thousand striking shop
men of the Philadelphia and Reading
company returned to work, as they
had been urged to do by President
Baer in his letter of Saturday. On
the other hand there were some ac-
cessions to the ranks of the strikers.

Held Act Unconstitutional.

Columbus, C., June 26.—The supreme court held the special act providing for the licensing of stationary
engineers in Cincinnati to be unconstitutional, and ousted the examining
board appointed under the act. The effect of the decision is to extend the jurisdiction of the state board created to license engineers over the entire state.

Miss Portia Knight Engaged Clarke.

London, June 26.—Miss Portia
Knight, the American actress, has engaged Sir Edward Clarke, the former
solicitor general, as counsel in the
suit for breach of promise which she
has brought against the Duke of Manchester.

Miss Ellen Lee Married.

New York, June 26.—The wedding
of Miss Ellen Lee, daughter of Brigadier General Fitzhugh Lee, to First Lieutenant James Cooper Rhea, of the Seventh cavalry, U. S. A., took place
in the Church of the Transfiguration,
in this city.

Grant Increase In Wages.

Cleveland, June 26.—The Big Consolidated Street Car company, which
controls the larger portion of the electric street car service in this city,
has granted its 1,200 employees a voluntary increase in wages, amounting
to about 10 cents a day.

A Lesson to Humorists.
One cannot safely assume in these
days that there is any region in which
such and such a journal is not read.
Recently a certain humorist needed a
rest and went and stopped in a cottage
in a remote village by the sea. His
sitting room opened on the kitchen,
where his landlady, a woman widely
esteemed as a person of great acumen
and a maker of phrases, was wont to receive the neighbors. He listened and
put both landlady and neighbors into
some amusing sketches which were
promptly published in a London magazine. A month or two went by. Then
one afternoon he came back to the cottage to meet and cover before an indignant matron, who told him, among
other things, that he had one hour in
which to pack his traps and quit the village. She was not going to have an
eavesdropper in her house, and she
added a significant hint to the effect

that the people of the village were of
the same opinion and might be betray-
ed into an attempt to give a forcible
demonstration of their views.—London
Post.

How she rules him.
"Skinphint's wife certainly has remarkable success in managing him. I
wonder how she does it."
"When he undertakes to deny her
anything she really wants, she threatens to sue him for divorce."
"Does he care so much for her,
then?"

"Oh, no, it's not that, but he figures
that it is cheaper to let her have her
own way than it would be to either
defend the suit or pay alimony."—Chicago Post.

Some men never amount to much because they get into the habit of frequently beginning life anew.—Chicago
